MRS. JOSEPHINE OGDEN FORRESTAL

Bandits Snatch Diamonds In Fashionable N. Y.

New York, July 2 (AP)—A quartet of jewel thieves invaded fashionable Beekman place early today and at gun-point stripped a society matron of jewelry valued at $100,000.

The robbery occurred only a few doors from the apartment house where Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, victim of last year's sensational bath tub murder, was strangled.

Mrs. Josephine Ogden Forrest, a socially prominent victim of Manhattan's latest jewel robbery, told police the bandits took two platinum bracelets set with diamonds and two platinum rings.

They did not take anything from her escort, Richard E. W. Hall, a broker, overlooking $700 he had in his pocket.

As Mrs. Forrestal and Hall arrived at the entrance of her apartment in Hall's chauffeured limousine, the bandit car drove up, they related, before Frederick Tucker, the chauffeur, could open the car door for Mrs. Forrestal, one of the robbers stuck a gun against his side, saying:

"What's your hurry, buddy?"

Another bandit climbed into the car and pulled the bracelets from Mrs. Forrestal's arms and the rings from her fingers. The other two robbers stood on the opposite side of the car.

The robbery lasted only a few seconds.

President's Critic Hit by U. S. in 14-Year-Old Suit

Pittsburgh, July 2 (AP)—William Driscoll, collector of Internal Revenue, has filed tax liens of $76,040 in federal court against Mayor Daniel J. Shields of Johnstown, Pa., and 13 others. Mayor Shields has led a campaign against CIO forces in the Johnstown steel strike.

The collector said the liens "grew out of possession of a quantity of beer and spirits found in an old brewery" in Johnstown several years ago.

In Johnstown, Mayor Shields commented:

"That was 14 years ago. It looks to me like an attempt to get me into line—to crucify me."

Mayor Shields in an impassioned appeal to President Roosevelt during the opening days of the steel strike begged the President to intervene, and not "let me down."

2 NURSES FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN ME. HOTEL ROOM MYSTERY

ONE DRUGGED, COMPANION SLASHED

Portland, Me., July 2—Under mysterious circumstances, two women nurses from Hotchkiss Boys' School, Lakeville, Conn., were taken today from their hotel room to Maine General Hospital here—one unconscious from a sedative, the other from a slashed wrist.

Police said the nurses had been identified as Miss Ruth Lucille Stewart, 36, and Miss Margaret Grant Elliott, 33.

According to Police Inspector Donald H. MacDougall, investigating the case, Miss Elliott admitted she had slashed her wrist with a razor. A note found in her room indicated a suicide pact.

REASON A MYSTERY

Neither woman would make any statement, however, regarding any reason for their plight in the Eastland Hotel, where they registered at 6:30 p. m. last Wednesday.

"I don't want to live," Miss Elliott sobbed at the hospital, according to police, but would give no reason for the remark.

Physicians said a blood transfusion may be necessary because of the great quantity of blood she had lost.

Her fellow nurse at the school, Miss Stewart, was revived without difficulty at the hospital.

The Eastland night clerk told police he received a call from the two women's room at 6:15 a. m. today and a woman's voice said weakly:

"For Heaven's sake, get me a doctor."

ADMITS SLASHING

Blood from the wrist of Miss Elliott had saturated her bed and had dropped down on several sheets of paper on the floor. The papers appeared to have writing on them, but nothing could be deciphered.

At the hospital, police said, she admitted having slashed her wrist with a razor at 9:30 o'clock last night. Then she refused further information.

From papers in her possession it was learned, Miss Elliott is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Elliott of Upper Montclair, N. J.

BULLETIN

San Francisco, July 3 (AP)—A radio contact was made with Amelia Earhart's plane at 4:18 a. m. P. S. T. (10:18 a. m. E. D. T.) today by operators of Howland Island goal of her 2570 mile flight, the coast guard here was advised. Radio conditions were unsatisfactory and no details were received.

San Francisco, July 2 (AP)—Amelia Earhart blazed a new air trail over the south Pacific today in a hazardous 2570-mile flight from Lae, New Guinea, to tiny Howland Island.

She started at 10 a. m. today, Lae time, (4 p. m., yesterday Pacific Standard Time) and was expected to complete it in about 18 or 20 hours.

It is the longest and most perilous flight ever undertaken by America's leading feminine aviator.

To aid her, the United States navy stationed the ocean going tug Ontario midway along her route and the coast guard sent the cutter Itasca to Howland Island.

The flight called for precise navigation by Fred Noonan, who charted Miss Earhart's course and is flying with her. Howland is half a mile wide and two miles long.

Two more long over-water hops lay ahead of Miss Earhart before the end of her globe-girdling itinerary in Oakland, Calif.

FORD ABSENT AT MUTUAL HEARING

Edward L. Ford, confidential secretary to Insurance Commissioner Frank J. DeCelles, failed to appear today in answer to a summons to testify before the special legislative commission investigating the bankrupt Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company.

From 10:30 a. m. the time at which Ford was scheduled to answer the commission's summons, until noon, the hearing lagged, as spectators of Ford's verbal and physical clash with Frank Cohen of New York waited.

Then Representative Frederick H. Tarr, Jr., of Rockport, called DeCelles' office. According to Tarr, DeCelles told him:

"I've given Mr. Ford another assignment. He won't be there."

The special investigating commission, waiting for its "star" witness, called others. But before it did, the gauntlet was flung in the

Substitute Court Plan Before Senate

Washington, July 2 (AP)—A Democratic substitute for the Roosevelt court bill went before the Senate today with an explanation by Senator Robinson, majority leader, that it would permit three appointments to the Supreme Court within the next six months.

Robinson said the bill, based upon the theory of one appointment to the court a year, would permit two new judges to be added within that time, in addition to an appointment to fill the existing vacancy.

OFFERED JOINTLY

The substitute was offered jointly by Chairman Ashurst (D., Ariz.) of the Senate judiciary committee and Senators Logan (D., Ky.) and Hatch (D., N. M.).

Hatch was one of the 10 members of the judiciary committee who approved an adverse report on the original Roosevelt bill.

The measure was offered as a complete substitute for the original court legislation which would have permitted appointment of six new justices if those over 70 years of age did not retire.

The substitute moves the retirement age up to 75, and provides that additional justices can be appointed annually by the President for those serving past that age.

The substitute also revises the maximum numbers of lower court judges who could be appointed downward from 50, in the original bill, to 20.

RETAINS PROCTOR PLAN

The substitute retains the provision of the original for a Supreme Court Proctor to advise on the condition of the lower courts and the assignment of additional judges to meet congestion.

It contains a new provision for

BANDIT TRIO IN BRIGHTON PAY HOLDUP

Three armed bandits, shortly before noon today, held up two employes in the office of the Boston Fresh Tripe Company, Abattoir avenue, Brighton, and escaped with $1000.

Walter Glidden, 46, of Putnam street, Watertown, the company's bookkeeper, was forced at gunpoint to open the safe which contained an $800 payroll and $200 in cash receipts.

The second employe, Charles H. Peters, 32, of Dunboy street, Brighton, was herded into a closet and told to lie down on his stomach while one of the bandits kept the muzzle of a revolver against his head.

BANDIT INTOXICATED

One bandit, dressed in a long butcher's coat, entered the office first and approaching Peters, asked for the "boss" stating he wanted a job.

Peters told police that he noticed the man was intoxicated and started to push him out of the office.

"That's just what I wanted you to do," snarled the bandit, pulling a gun out and poking it into Peters' ribs.

The two other bandits then entered the office, their guns drawn and covering Glidden.

"Which one of you guys can open the safe?" one asked, and Peters pointed to Glidden, in face of the three menacing revolvers.

After one thug forced Peters into the closet, Glidden began to fumble with the safe combination, stalling for time, and then remarking that it was broken.

KICKED IN CHEST

As an answer he received a kick in the chest with the warning to "make it snappy."

"Cut out the rough stuff and let's get going," the second bandit sold his confederate who kicked Glidden.

As the safe was opened, the two bandits scooped up the money, called their companion who was standing Peters, and the trio dashed out into a waiting automobile which sped up North Beacon street.

Roger Griffin, a nearby worker, saw the men flee but did not get the registration of the car. Glidden went to his physician, Dr. Walter Crosby, who treated him for abrasions of the chest.

DeCelles Rebuked in Mutual Case

PROBER DENIES COHEN IMMUNE FROM ARREST

DECELLES REBUKED

With the exception of Representative John W. Coddaire of Haverhill, members of the commission issued a statement declaring that if DeCelles had wanted to cause the arrest of Cohen yesterday—or his indictment—and if there were grounds for either action, there was nothing to prevent either action.

"The reason for this announcement," said Senator Edmund S. Oppenheimer, one of the commission, "is that DeCelles made the statement before this body that if it had not been for the writ of protection granted Cohen, Cohen would have been indicted on criminal charges.

COVERED CIVIL ACTION

"Cohen was not immune from arrest on any criminal charge if a criminal charge had been preferred. A writ of protection gives immunity only from service or process in a civil action. Cohen had no more immunity than any other witness who has been called."

BANKER CALLED

Meanwhile, waiting for Ford, the commission called J. Henry Miley, vice-president and treasurer of the Pilgrim Trust Company, with which the Comonwealth Mutual group conducted a series of banking transactions.

Questioning began about the much-discussed check transaction that accompanied issuance of the Commonwealth's license to do business in this state.

Miley recalled that three checks of the State Underwriters' Agency, an affiliate of the Commonwealth, had been returned by the Pilgrim Trust Company to the Federal Reserve Bank with the notation "No Funds."

He said that the checks were dated January 2, 1936, and that two of them were for $5000 each, while the third was for $3000. Representative Frederick H. Tarr, Jr., of Rockport, wanted to know if Miley did not consider this "strange."

"It is always strange when checks are presented and there is no account," was the witness' reply.

Albert Johnson, assistant treasurer of Pilgrim Trust testified that the Insurance Brokers Finance Corporion, also an affiliate of Commonwealth, made a loan of, $24,000, on check, dated, Jan. 31, 1935, which was secured by the insurance policies issued by the Commonwealth.

WARNED OF COMPANY

Grover Hoyt, former secretary, and later chairman, of the state auto tax board of appeals, testified that he appeared before the joint legislative rules committee, at which time he said he felt a license should never have been issued to the Commonwealth company.

"I reached this conclusion because of the rumors that were abroad prior to the issuance of the license," he told the commission.

"The matter was first called to my attention when an editor of The Weekly Underwriter of New York, for which publication I wrote, called me on the telephone and told me he understood a new mutual insurance company was to be organized in Massachusetts.

"He asked me to get a line on who was behind the company. I got the names of the seven incorporators, all of whom were Boston men and reported to the New York editor.

"He said there was apparently something wrong as the company was to be financed by New York capital. I then called up one of the incorporators and asked him who was to be the financial backer of the company and he told me Frank Cohen of New York, who was to won the company.

HAD DOUBTS THEN

"I notified the Weekly Underwriter editor of the information I had obtained and told him it was seemingly apparent the company was not going to make the grade.

"On the last day of December, 1935, the editor called me from New York and told me that he necessary funds had been supplied in New York and that the license was to be granted that afternoon. I checked and found that to be correct."

"Did the incorporator with whom you talked show any reticence when he told you that Cohen was to be the financial backer of the Commonwealth?"

"No, none whatever, I told him I was a reporter and wanted the information for publication. I presume the Weekly Underwriter printed the fact at the time, but I didn't bother to look and see."

SNT TO COMMONWEALTH

The witness said that he frequently heard Mr. Bodfish, chairman of the appeal board, say to motorists, after they had been turned down by other insurance companies and the board of appeal had upheld the companies:

"Go down to the Commonwealth; they'll take care or you."

Q—Do you mean to say that the chairman of the appeal board, after turning down a motorist on appeal would then refer him to the Commonwealth for insurance? A—Yes.

Q—Well, that would load the company up with undesirable risks, wouldn't it? A—That's exactly what happened.

Hoyt further testified that prior to organization of the Commonwealth the rumors were that the company would "take anything and everything."

"I heard Commissioner DeCelles say that he thought the policy of the company to take everything and then weed out the bad risks, was correct," he added.

TO VISIT NEW YORK

Senator Edmund Oppenheimer, chairman of the commission, announced that the commission will visit New York over the week-end to obtain depositions from persons named by Cohen in his testimony yesterday.

Cohen told the commission during his testimony that if the commission is interested in corroborating his statement that DeCelles went to New York three months before the license was granted to the Commonwealth company, and knew he, Cohen, was to be the financial backer, they could easily do so by making a trip to New York and talk with the persons he named.

During his examination DeCelles testified under oath that the first time he met Cohen was in the middle of December 1936. Cohen insisted he entertained DeCelles and his wife in Hotel Pierre New York, October 4 and 5, 1935.

WHITE HOUSE BAN ON PICTURES LIFTED

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2 (AP)—White House officials today lifted from two news photographic organizations a ban imposed because of pictures taken by visitors at the Democratic "love feast" on Jefferson Island last week and distributed by the two services.

The organizations are the Associated Press, of which Edward Stanley is executive editor in the news photo division and the Acme News Picture Service, of which Fred Ferguson is president.

Ferguson and Stanley visited President Roosevelt here yesterday and, following the conference, issued the following statement:

"We called on the President at his invitation and laid before him our points of view with reference to the situation arising over the taking of pictures on Jefferson Island last week.

"We did not make any request for action on the part of the President. We merely wanted him to understand fully our position in the matter.

"We told the President that we did not feel that there had been any impropriety or violation of the agreements that we or other reputable news or photographic organizations maintained with the White House.

"We believe that the matter is being amicably and amiably adjusted in our negotiations with Secretary Early."

Stephen T. Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, notified the two services earlier in the week they would be put under a temporary ban.

United Markers Win Pay Increase

Wages were increased and working hours reduced for 1400 employes of the United Markers of Boston in a decision handed down today by the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, with agreement of both sides.

The hours will be 52 a week for men and 45 for women, and the minimums, $20 for men and $18 for women. The entire cost of laundering of uniforms, heretofore borne partly by the employes, will be borne by the company.

3 BANDITS GET LONG TERMS

Three young bandits who "terrorized" Middlesex County for a month, according to the prosecution, were given heavy sentences in Middlesex Superior Court today by Judge John E. Swift.

John Glynn, 22, of Oak street, Somerville, fugitive from a Virginia chain gang, was sentenced on three counts for a total of 9½ to 13½ years to state prison.

John Newell, 22, of Highland avenue, also Somerville, was sentenced to serve concurrently three terms of eight years each at Concord reformatory.

Thomas F. Doherty, 22, of Huntington avenue, Back Bay, was given three concurrent sentences of five years and a day each at Concord.

A jury found all three guilty yesterday of the armed robbery of $280 at the Candyland Tea Room in Lowell on May 30. Glynn was also convicted of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on an employe of the tea room.

Just before being sentenced today, the men entered pleas of guilty to a series of other armed robberies in Cambridge and Belmont.

FIGHT SCHEDULED ON SUGAR BILL

Washington, July 2 (USI)—Presaging a bitter fight, the House agriculture committee has reported out the Jones-O'Mahoney sugar bill providing for quotas and benefit payments.

The committee, headed by Representative Jones (D.) of Texas, brought out the bill after months of internal wrangling over its salient features.

Secretary of State Hull and officials of the Department of the Interior are on record in opposition to the measure which is said to "discriminate" against Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

TREASURY ASKS JOINT INCOME FOR COUPLES

Washington, July 2 (INS)—The widely-heralded congressional investigation of tax avoidance was temporarily closed today after new proposals were made to increase tax revenues and plug loopholes.

One treasury proposal, which startled some members of the Senate-House investigating committee, would lump income of husbands and wives for tax purposes. It was estimated that $193,000,000 could be raised in one year by this method.

Treasury officials also proposed to slap higher taxes on foreigners who have invested huge sums in the United States in the last few years.

NEXT SESSION TUESDA

As Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill announced that the Treasury had presented its evidence, Chairman Doughton (D.) of North Carolina called an executive session for Tuesday.

The joint committee, Doughton said, will begin framing stop-gap legislation. General revision of the tax laws will be considered in the fall.

Earlier, Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue Charles Russell warned the committee that Congress should take some steps toward curbing the growing device of setting up pension trusts as a means of avoiding taxes.

Constitutionality of Magill's proposal was challenged by Repa. Cooper (D.) of Tennessee and Vinson (D.) Kentucky.

Magill conceded it is a "close question" whether Congress can compel lumping of income of husbands and wives in all states but he thought that it is worth a try.

TREADWAY BILL

Rep. Treadway (R.) of Massachusetts said he introduced a bill in 1934 designed to remove the tax advantage of community property states.

Arthur H. Kent, assistant treasury counsel, told the committee that foreigners, who have invested billions in the United States, have a distinct tax advantage over Americans.

Under the law, he explained, nonresident aliens pay a 10 per cent tax on American earnings. A foreign corporation, not engaged in business but receiving income from the United States, pays a tax of 15 per cent.

At one point, Kent submitted a list of more than 100 prominent foreigners whose taxes on income from Americans sources were paid at a lesser rate than that imposed on American citizens. On a motion by Rep. Cooper (D.) Tennessee, the committee declined to accept the names for the record on the grounds that they were complying with the law and were not guilty of evasion.

STATE FACING LOSS OF U. S. ROAD FUNDS

Diversion of $6,500,000 in state gasoline taxes to general purposes in last month's hectic closing of the Legislature may mean a government penalty dispatches from Washington indicated today.

The Bureau of Public Roads at Washington said that the Secretary of Agriculture would decide in two or three weeks whether to penalize Massachusetts for the diversion.

Officials of the bureau explained provisions of the Hayden-Cartwright act required the federal bureau to penalize states diverting such money by reducing federal allocations for roads by not more than one-third of the total amounts.

$3,171,423 FEDERAL AID

The federal allocation for Massachusetts for the fiscal year 1938, beginning July 1, is $3,171,423, officials said. However, they added, Massachusetts' allotment for the last fiscal year had not been obligated.

They declared the fact that there had been a decision and would not halt any highway projects in the state.

Legal experts of the bureau said the Massachusetts situation was "complicated," because the state had diverted highway funds before enactment of the Hayden-Cartwright act in 1934.

FACTS STILL CONFUSED

However, they said they had not yet determined whether the amount diverted in this year by the State Legislature exceeded the amounts diverted in past years. They also explained the type of projects for which the money was diverted would be considered.

New diversions of funds, since 1934, might, the officials explained, make Massachusetts liable to penalty.

They said final determination of the matter was being held up by preparation of fiscal yearend statements and studies.

Record Crowds On Holiday Trek For 4th in N. E.

With travel agencies and transportation companies reporting record high bookings today, the holiday trek in New England over the week-end was expected to reach the greatest number in years.

Airlines, railroads, bus companies and steamship companies have already announced capacity bookings and added that arrangements were being made to accomodate extra passenger loads.

The New England Council forecast that this weekend would see the "greatest influx of holiday visitors and Summer vacationists to New England in many years."

At Boston airport, officials reported near sell-outs on the various lines. American Airways predicted that previous passenger records would be smashed by 35 to 40 per cent.

The New Haven Railroad announced that 928 extra coaches, with a capacity of 72,000 passengers, and 208 extra pullmans, accomodating 6000, will be put into service.

"Everything on wheels" will be put into commission, the Boston & Maine Railroad stated, anticipating the greatest amount of travel in ten years."

Close to 15,000 youngsters are expected to head for summer camps in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont over the weekend.

BONFIRES IN CITY

Greater Boston prepared for its most gala July Fourth celebration in years, featured by giant bonfires tomorrow and Sunday night and an extensive program of activities on the official observance day, Monday.

Though the use of fireworks has been banned on Sunday, the firing of huge piles of wood at points throughout the state promise a festive display to usher in the delayed holiday—which actually falls on July 5.

The majority of bonfires will be lighted Sunday night. Boston's monument of barrels and railroad ties will be burned then at the Smith Playground in Brighton on the end near Soldiers' Field. A guard has been placed over it until the time for setting-off arrives.

Boston's Monday celebrations will begin with a flag-raising at City Hall, followed by a parade to the Common, the Old State House and Faneuil Hall, where orations exercises will be held.

During the morning a municipal track meet will be held at Franklin Field and neighborhood programs will be in progress in 25 sections of the city.

On Boston Common, from eight to ten at night, a community festival will take place with a band concert, singing and dancing and fireworks.

North Beverly and Bedford will light their bonfires tomorrow night but most of the communities will assemble their spectators for the night before the Monday celebration.

Most picturesque of the observances will take place in Duxbury, which is celebrating its 300th anniversary this summer. The South Shore community will light its bonfire Sunday night and Monday's program will start off with a yacht race at 7 a. m.

The three-day celebration will be climaxed by a grand parade in which every towns nave entered historical floats.

GUARD BONFIRES

In many communities the bonfires are being guarded by police and ingenuarires to avoid their being lighted by pranksters beforehand. Most of the piles are from 60 to 90 feet high and will be visible for five miles or more.

Mayor Leslie E. Knox will touch off Somerville's pile on McCarthy's Ledge. That city's celebration will continue Monday morning with a parade starting at Teele square.

Hingham will hold a combined horribles, historic and children's parade Monday morning. Winthrop will begin its Fourth celebration tonight with the American Legion annual carnival.

The New England States Veteran Firemen's League will stage its 47th annual muster in Glendale Park, Everett, Monday, with prizes totalling $975 awarded in the competition among 25 hand engines.

State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity today issued a plea for a "safe and sane" Fourth, advising parents to make sure their children buy only "legal" fireworks and to supervise their setting off.

Fr. McGarry Assumes B.C. Duties Today

REV. W. J. McGARRY
New B. C. President

VERY REV. L. J. GALLAGHER
Retiring B. C. Head

Rev. William J. McGarry, S. J., former Weston College dean whose appointment as the president of Boston College was revealed exclusively by the Boston Evening American, took over his new duties on the Heights today.

He delved into the program of work relinquished by the Very Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., assigned temporarily to private work at Boston College High School.

The new president, whose appointment came direct from Rome through Ledimir Ledobowski, general of the Society of Jesus, said he accepted his post with "a spirit of obedience."

He said he would first try to learn the tradition of the college and then "carry on the work which has been done so well before me." For the next month he will continue his work as teacher of human origins at the summer school.

Fr. McGarry was born in Hamilton, March 14, 1894. He attended Hamilton grammar school, and Boston College High school.

He entered the Society of Jesus and made his novitiate studies at St. Andrew-on-Hudson from 1911 to 1915. He studied philosophy at Woodstock College, Maryland, where he received both B.A. and M.A. degrees.

He taught mathematics at Fordham University from 1918 to 1922 and won a Ph.D. degree during his stay there. He completed his theological studies in 1926.

His first appointment thereafter was at Weston College as teacher of sacred scriptures. He went to the Pontifical Institute at Rome and on his return to Weston was made professor of sacred scripture and dogmatic theology. During the past three years he was dean of studies at the college.

Cook Fixes Spain Link at Harvard

Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook announced today he had been informed by the attorney-general's office, that there was "no connection between Harvard University as a corporation, and a fund raised at Harvard for aiding loyalists wounded in Spain.

Cook said he "relayed this finding" to Senator Thomas H. Burke, who recently challenged the raising of money by a "charitable corporation to aid a subversive form of government."

10 Die in British Mine Explosions

London, July 2 (AP)—Ten persons, including five officials, were believed to have been killed in an explosion and fire today in the Brymbo coal mine at Chesterton, Staffordshire. The fire broke out after two blasts. The second explosion killed the four officials who had entered the mine to investigate the cause of the first.

A number of workers were seriously injured.

Its Possible Result

Child Bride, 14, Goes Home; Spat, Says His Mother

The flame of love that overcame arrest, court action and parental discord and promised idyllic happiness today flickered very low in the heart of Mrs. Geraldine Helen Jordan Murphy, Dorchester's 14-year-old child bride.

And a scant three months after her elopement with Joseph Murphy, 20-year-old childhood sweetheart, definite separation was a fact.

Whether the romance that projected Geraldine into the headlines was headed for the rocks drew conflicting statements from relatives of the youthful husband and wife, but it was certain that pretty Mrs. Murphy was no longer living under Joseph's roof.

"It's just a lover's quarrel," Mrs. Edward Murphy of Fifield street, Dorchester, Geraldine's mother-in-law, declared.

"It's the end of the romance and it's all for the best," was the terse comment of Mrs. Myrtle Kappler of Park street, Dorchester, Geraldine's aunt with whom she is now living.

Mrs. Kappler indicated that Geraldine would never return to Joseph. She said her niece and her mother planned to leave the state today for a "long vacation and rest."

LEFT SATURDAY

Geraldine left her mother-in-law's home Saturday night.

Mrs. Murphy declared the reason was a "lover's spat" and that Geraldine was homesick for her own family. She had been happy in the Murphy home, the mother-in-law said, but like the average young girl wanted "new clothes and good times."

"She'll be back again," Mrs. Murphy predicted.

Joseph recently lost his job with a furniture company and was forced to move from the modest apartment he had set up back to the family quarters. He could not be located for a statement last night and Mrs. Kappler refused to let Geraldine be interviewed.

They were wed in Seabrook, N. H., March 21, and kept the secret to themselves while still living at the homes of their respective parents.

FOUND IN THEATER

Their marriage came to light when the pair decided to take a honeymoon and failed to show up for several days. They were picked up in a Scollay square all-night theater by police officers suspicious of Geraldine's age and in a questioning at headquarters revealed they were husband and wife.

Mrs. Jordan, Geraldine's mother, preferred charges against both her daughter and Murphy, charging Geraldine of being a stubborn child and her husband of abduction.

The flame of love burned high, however, and within a few days Mrs. Jordan relented and dropped the charges when the couple appeared in court.

Girl, Only 2, Rated Plus Genius

Scores 145 Points in Mental Test

Norman, Okla., July 2 (AP)—Betty Ann Laxton, 32 months old rated 25 points above a genius in intelligence today.

Dr. M. O. Wilson, professor of psychology at the University of Oklahoma here, said tests he gave the child showed her I. Q. as 145. A score of 120 points for a child her age, he said, would be that of a genius.

Betty Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Laxton of Muskogee. Dr. Wilson said her vocabulary is equal to that of an eight-year-old child.

"I'm tired as a heathen, but I guess it was worth it," she said when the tests were over.

The child's achievements include counting to 10, reciting the alphabet to "U," a repertoire of 30 songs and several melodies on the piano, ability to distinguish American coins, recognizing five colors and operating the family radio.

Fireworks Blast Kills 3; Children at Play Blamed

Nampa, Idaho, July 2 (AP)—Children at play were blamed by officials today as they started an investigation of the fireworks explosion in which three persons were killed and 20 others maimed and injured. It was the nation's first major pre-Independence Day catastrophe.

Fire Chief L. T. Lessieger said a child touched off a fireworks window display yesterday that turned a crowded drug store and beauty parlor into an inferno of blasting explosives.

Several of the other victims suffered broken arms and legs in addition to powder burns.

Coroner William Talley said an inquest would be held to determine the cause of the blast.

Mrs. Dora Smith, who escaped with minor injuries was at the soda fountain when the blast rocked the store.

"The store was packed with women and children—there were at least 30 in the place. Flames and flying explosives shot everywhere," she said.

W. J. O'Keefe Dean Of B. C. Law School

Boston College law school today announced the appointment of William J. O'Keefe of Randolph, supervisor of research and school law in the department of education, as dean of the school, effective August 1.

LINDY'S HOP 1ST SINCE STORK

Lympne, Kent, England, July 2 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off today for an announced destination on his first air trip since his "stork" return from an eastern tour on April 9.

It was believed he was heading for Eire, Ireland, in connection with the impending inauguration of experimental trans-Atlantic flights by the Pan-American and Imperial Airways.

President Rests With Family at Hyde Park Home

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 2 (INS)—The Hudson river estate of his 83-year-old mother served a welcome refuge from the cares of office for President Roosevelt today as he devoted himself to a carefree holiday.

Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre said the President had no set engagements, leaving the chief executive to explore his property, swim in the pool at the Valkill cottage and entertain his neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the President's son-in-law and daughter, motored to New York today, ending their first visit East in months. They will fly back to Seattle late in the day.

Mrs. Roosevelt, the wives of James and Elliott Roosevelt, and John, youngest son, remained at the Hyde Park house.

As a guest of John, 21-year-old Harvard undergraduate, was Miss Anne Clark of Boston. Rumor has it that this is the final romance of the White House family.

Parrot Quits Home for Franklin Park

Maybe it's the beginning of a romance at the Franklin Park aviary because "Suzette," a green parrot, a daily visitor to the park, failed to return home as usual last night.

It seems "Suzette" is a well trained bird. Every day its owner, Miss Beatrice Mark of Dale street, Roxbury, let "Suzette" out of its cage and away the bird flew to Franklin Park.

Last night was the first time "Suzette" did not come home at suppertime. Miss Mark told officers at the Dudley street station.

So off to Franklin Park, and to the aviary in particular, went an officer today to find "Suzette"—and put an end to any summer flirtation, if that is the case.

Plan Sanity Test in Roosevelt Threat

Attorney Frank C. Gotman appeared before Commissioner Harry N. Guterman in federal court today and looked over the complaint against Morton D. Wainwright, 72, of Winthrop, charged with sending a threatening letter to President Roosevelt.

Probation Officer Richard B. McSweeney said his office will petition to have Weinwright committed to the psycopathic hospital for observation, and afterward have him passed upon by the state court for commitment to some institution.

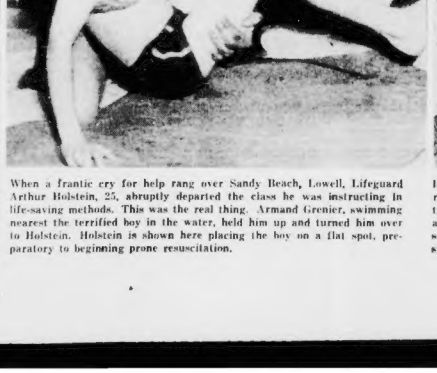
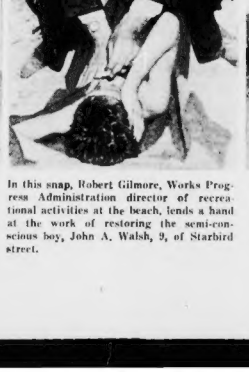
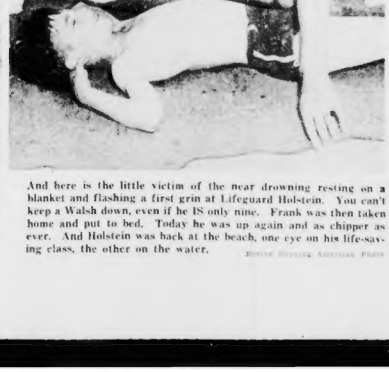
QUITS LIFE SAVING LESSON TO PUT KNOWLEDGE INTO ACTION



When a frantic cry for help rang over Sandy Beach, Lowell, Lifeguard Arthur Holstein, 25, abruptly departed the class he was instructing in life-saving methods. This was the real thing. Armand Grenier, swimming nearest the terrified boy in the water, held him up and turned him over to Holstein. Holstein is shown here placing the boy on a flat spot, preparatory to beginning prone resuscitation.



In this snap, Robert Gilmore, Works Progress Administration director of recreational activities at the beach, lends a hand at the work of restoring the semi-conscious boy, John A. Walsh, 9, of Starbird street.



And here is the little victim of the near drowning resting on a blanket and flashing a first grin at Lifeguard Holstein. You can't keep a Walsh down, even if he IS only nine. Frank was then taken home and put to bed. Today he was up again and as chipper as ever. And Holstein was back at the beach, one eye on his life-saving class, the other on the water.

CODMAN BILLS QUESTIONED BY AUDITOR

City Auditor Charles J. Fox, on the witness stand at the Finance Commission's investigation of the city's dealings with the Codman Hill Construction Company, admitted today he twice questioned the company's president about the accuracy of bills submitted to the George Robert White Fund.

As city auditor, Fox is ex officio a member of the White Fund board of trustees, of which Mayor Mansfield is chairman.

Both in September of last year and March of this year, Fox said, he questioned William J. Driscoll, head of the Codman Hill concern, who is now in jail for alleged contempt of court, for failing to produce the company's books.

LATER GAVE APPROVAL

The city auditor stated that, after talking with Driscoll, and later with officials of the White fund, he gave the bills his approval.

These officials of the fund were George Driscoll, the secretary, and Major Roswell G. Hall, superintendent of public buildings and manager of the White fund's real estate.

The Codman Hill concern has done some $400,000 worth of business with the city in the last three years, most of it repair work on buildings owned by the George Robert White estate.

Fox exchanged angry words with George R. Farnum, special counsel for the finance commission, after the latter had pressed him as to why he did not make the president of the Codman Hill Construction Company take an oath as to the accuracy of the bills.

"You knew that under the city charter you could put him under oath?" asked Farnum.

"Yes," said Fox, "I didn't because after talking with George Driscoll and Mr. Hall, there was no doubt or cloud of suspicion in my mind. There was nothing to indicate the charges were fraudulent or unlawful."

The city auditor then said angrily:

"I might say, without rancor or feeling, Mr. Farnum, that I question the fairness of your proceedings."

RETORT BY FARNUM

"I won't express my opinion as to the fairness of your answers to my questions," retorted Farnum.

Apparently angered by the outburst of the city auditor, who is also a trustee of the White Fund, Farnum went to his desk and picked up a bill submitted by the Codman Hill Construction Company, dated Dec. 2, 1935.

This bill contained an item of $22 for 200 feet of No. 14 wire. Farnum said the current price is one cent a foot, or $4 for 200 feet. Fox said he did not know either the current price or the price at the time the work was done.

Farnum was thereupon accused by Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph P. Brennan of making a speech and of testifying without taking an oath.

It was brought out that Fox has within the past week engaged a certified public accountant to audit the fund's books for last year, but that this will not take place until after counsel or city auditor.

Farnum drew from the city auditor the statement that Fox was not satisfied with the latter's auditing methods, under which the approval of a bill by a department head is generally taken to be sufficient endorsement of its accuracy.

FIXED BY CHARTER

Fox declared however, that the city charter placed the responsibility on the shoulders of the department heads.

In the case of the White Fund bills, Fox said these came to his office initialed by George Driscoll and signed by Major Hall and Mayor Mansfield as chairman of the trustees.

Farnum brought out, and Fox admitted, that Major Hall probably had no time to make a personal check on work done for the estate, but Fox insisted that Driscoll made personal visits to the scene of operations. Farnum contended this was impossible, considering Driscoll's other duties.

SOVIETS EXECUTE 70 IN HUGE 'SPY RING'

newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, expressed belief that the secret service had not yet seized all members of the band, which he said had agents in the Red army and in munitions factories.

Zakovsky said "K" was recruited while in Estonia in 1931, and after receiving training as a radio operator, was sent to the Soviet Union to organize an insurgent group.

The man "K" was reported to have established a small radio station in a forest to receive "coded instructions from the Estonian intelligence service."

TWO GERMAN "SPIES"

Zadovsky also referred to the arrest of two German engineers alleged to be spies and the dispersal of a group of from 50 to 70 persons in White Russia, who allegedly were agents of the Polish intelligence service.

He disclosed the execution of an unnamed Red air corps commander for spy activities. This man allegedly enlisted a group of mechanics in his air squadron who inspected with planes and caused fatal crashes. His accomplices were arrested.

Tokyo Bares New Soviet "Invasion"

Tokyo, July 2 (AP)—Official Japan charged a new invasion of Manchoukuoan territory by Russian planes and gunboats today, insisted it had no "armed forces" on the disputed Amur river islands and put the question of future location of Japanese troops in the border area up to "the supreme army authorities."

WAR PLANES SIGHTED

Army officials said "the question of evacuation of the islands as raised by the Soviet government does not exist"—that only "peaceful fishermen, lighthouse and beacon keepers now occupy" the disputed sand pits which the Japanese say belong to Manchoukuo.

Dispatches from Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, said three Soviet planes flew low over Sennufu island yesterday and disappeared in an unknown direction.

Simultaneously, the dispatches stated, five Soviet gunboats moved into Manchoukuoan waters near the scene of a clash between Soviet vessels and Japanese forces on Wednesday.

Japanese-Manchoukuoan authorities, determined to protect navigation in the Amur River, northeastern boundary between Siberia and Manchoukuo, discussed forceful means to cope with the situation. They will escort steamers by gunboat, if necessary.

Anxiety was expressed for the safety of the Manchoukuoan steamer Heigkan, which sailed from Hulin, on the Ussuri river, toward the Amur on the day of the clash between Soviet gunboats and Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces. The vessel arrived at the junction of the two rivers that evening, but has not since been reported.

Japanese officials repeated that all Japan and Manchoukuo desire is that Soviet Russia withdraw forces from the Amur river islands and if this is done "Japan and Manchoukuo are ready to adopt a conciliatory" attitude, in the interests of peace.

Soviet Russia proposed to withdraw her troops if Japan would do likewise. The Japanese army statement that Japan has no armed forces on the Amur Islands, and the declaration that questions of future Japanese troop withdrawal from the area are up to the Japanese supreme army command, came in answer to that proposal.

Japan Hints War In Moscow Parleys

Moscow, July 2 (INS)—Japan intends to establish the right of its puppet empire, Manchoukuo, to Sennufu and other disputed islands in the Amur river, experts said here. Japanese Ambassador Namoru Shigemitsu declared today.

His words were interpreted as pertinent meaning Japan might fight for these islands, should resort to arms be necessary.

Shigemitsu made his statement after he and Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov had argued heatedly for hours over the Amur river crisis.

OFFER BY SOVIET

After they conferred, the Soviet government issued a communique stating it had offered to withdraw its forces from the disputed islands provided Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces likewise withdraw. So far there has been no intimation of Japanese acceptance of this condition.

Shigemitsu, the communique stated, said appearance of Soviet gunboats and troops at the disputed islands created a tense situation, and was the cause of the conflict—therefore the Soviet forces should withdraw first.

In reply, Litvinov said it was unwise to argue over the legality or illegality of the appearance of the Soviet patrols, terming these points which could be proved at later meetings.

In turn, Shigemitsu promised to study the Soviet proposals and resume negotiations later today.

JAPAN UNSATISFIED

After his conference with Litvinov, Shigemitsu was understood to consider the conversation "unsatisfactory" from the Japanese point of view.

Reflecting Japanese indignation over the "gag rule" which the foreign office here imposed on all Moscow foreign correspondents, Shigemitsu protested to the Soviet government against the new veil of secrecy flung over the crisis.

One Japanese correspondent threatened to turn in his press card when his message was stopped by the censor.

Protestant Foe of Hitler Jailed

Berlin, July 2 (US)—The Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the Protestant church opposition to Chancellor Hitler, was arrested in his home here by agents of the dreaded Gestapo (secret police).

The "man Hitler would not dare to touch," was taken into custody by a squad of Gestapo men who forced him to open his private safe from which $7500 and numerous church documents were confiscated.

NAZIS, ITALY OFFER SPAIN RIGHTS PLAN

By the Associated Press

Italy and Germany, until flatly opposed to an Anglo-French neutrality patrol of all Spain's coasts, proposed today that both sides of the Spanish civil war be given belligerent rights.

The plan was offered jointly at a second critical meeting of the non-intervention sub-committee dealing with the withdrawal of Germany and Italy from the four-power neutrality naval patrol.

It was submitted as a counter-proposal to the Anglo-French plan and left still unanswered how Europe was to save its peace from possible Spanish explosion.

French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos was reported in Paris to have told the Chamber of Deputies foreign affairs committee that France and Britain might override Italo-German objections and jointly patrol Spain's coasts.

Britons, meanwhile, received fresh reminders of their empire's defense preparations. Warnings were posted against suspicious aerial photography. A drive was announced for 8,000,000 tons of scrap iron and steel for armaments.

Insurgent troops in northern Spain said they had invaded the province of Santander, General Franco's major northern objective.

SENATE WEIGHS COURT SHIFT

speedy appeal to the Supreme Court of lower court decisions involving constitutionality of acts of Congress.

Robinson said Attorney General Cummings and Solicitor General Reed had "been very helpful" in drafting the new bill.

"The substitute for the court reorganization bill presented by Senators Logan, Hatch and Ashhurst," Robinson said, "authorizes increases in the membership of the Supreme Court by the appointment of one additional justice in each calendar year where justices of the court have reached the age of 75 years.

"It is the Hatch amendment, including the suggestion originally made by Senator McGill D. Kan.)

LIMITS OTHER JUDGES

"Additional judges in other courts of the United States may be appointed where judges have reached the age of 70 years. A limitation is imposed of 20 as the aggregate number of such judges who may be so appointed.

"The substitute also authorizes the appointment by the Supreme Court of a proctor to gather information and to supply the same to the Supreme Court, as to the volume, character and status of litigation in the district courts and circuit courts of appeal; to investigate the need of assigning district and circuit judges to other courts than the courts to which they have been commissioned; and to recommend with the approval of the chief justice methods for expediting cases.

OTHER PROVISIONS

"The substitute also contains provisions for the review by the Supreme Court of interlocutory or final judgments in cases involving the validity or constitutionality of federal statutes.

"The provision is drafted with a view to permitting the government through the attorney-general to present evidence and argument and to take appeals in cases of proceedings where the constitutionality of federal statutes is in question, such appeals to be expedited and promptly determined.

"Under the terms of the substitute any circuit judge or district judge may be designated, or assigned, by the chief justice for service in courts other than the one to which he has been commissioned, but such assignment or designation will be under such terms and conditions as not to interfere with the prompt transaction of business by the judge in his own district, or circuit."

BILL CHARGES ESTATE ABUSE TO JOHNSON

Specifications of charges that Melvin M. Johnson, dean of Boston University Law School, mismanaged and abused the assets of the $1,250,000 estate of the late Arthur G. Pollard of Lowell, have been filed in Middlesex probate court, it was learned today.

The bill of specifications is filed in connection with an action seeking Johnson's removal as an executor of the estate and protesting acceptance of the executors' report.

Attorney Johnson is accused of having collected rents on real estate owned by the estate and with having failed to turn over the proceeds to the heirs-at-law.

The bill alleges mismanagement of the A. G. Pollard Company, operators of one of Lowell's largest department stores, and sets forth that "by reason of the acts of the executors," charities, legatees and creditors of the estate, with a few exceptions, have "suffered."

DAUGHTER COMPLAINANT

Serving with Johnson as co-executor is John F. Sawyer, president of the Union Old Lowell National Bank. Sawyer's activities are also scored in the part of the action which protests the acceptance of the executors' report on the estate.

Mrs. Edith P. Sheppard, daughter of Pollard, is complainant in the case, acting through Attorney Max J. Cohen of Lowell. Her father was a department store head, a bank president and president of a railroad before his death, June 4, 1930.

A brother of the plaintiff, Harry G. Pollard, had also served as an executor for the estate, but resigned last November.

Mrs. Sheppard alleges that her brother has been indebted to the estate and that Johnson and Sawyer not only failed to bring suit but had allowed the younger Pollard to increase his indebtedness.

HIGH FEES CHARGED

Johnson "and others" are charged with having planned to secure $125,000 for the brother, plus the cancellation of his indebtedness to the estate. The action seeks to force return to the estate of $125,000.

The bill sets forth that the younger Pollard's appointment as manager of the Pollard company constituted a great loss to the estate, that the financing of the company was not for best interests of the estate and that assets of both company and estate have been wasted.

The executors are accused of having paid excessive fees to themselves and others and of having managed the estate "for the best interests of the Union Old Lowell National Bank, with Johnson's consent."

Hearing of the protest against acceptance of the executors' report will begin in Cambridge on July 8. Mrs. Sheppard seeks to have the petition to remove Johnson heard at the same time.

Councilor Held On Auto Charges

Charges of drunkenness, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage, were lodged in Quincy court today against Neil McDonald, member of the Quincy City Council.

McDonald, who lives in West street, West Quincy, pleaded not guilty to all charges and was released for a hearing next Thursday.

He was arrested last night in Milton, after he had allegedly struck a parked car in Dedham and later a traffic beacon.

Find Woman Dead In Dorchester

In a vacant suite in the apartment house in which she lives, Mrs. Clara Yates, 60, of Dix street, Dorchester, was found dead today by her housekeeper, Mrs. Lillian Hobart.

Beside her according to police, was a tumbler of water and several capsules of a sleeping aid. Her husband, Robert, a letter carrier, said she had suffered a nervous breakdown but appeared to be all right when he left for work this morning.

Human Aim Urged for Engineers

Need Social Training, Says Whitehead

A warning that our civilization may collapse unless engineers of the future are trained in social needs and customs was sounded today by Prof. Thomas N. Whitehead, of Harvard, before the National Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Professor Whitehead asserted that industrial unrest is not due to economic causes, but to disruption of the accustomed social life of the people, making existence dreary and unsatisfying.

In spite of this, he said, engineers design factories with complete lack of knowledge of the people who are going to be affected.

WARNING REPEATED

Virtually the same warning was delivered by Professor V. M. Faires of Texas A. and M. College, who said there is need for men who comprehend the social implications of machines as well as their technology.

Professor Whitehead said:

"Until educational establishments regard sociological research as of equal importance with research of a more strictly engineering nature, it is inevitable the student will conclude all he needs is a knowledge of applied science and mechanisms.

"An analogous situation has arisen in the university training of business administrators. Until lately it was considered sufficient to teach them the technique required for running an enterprise, without any regard for the repercussions of these on society at large.

WIDER TRAINING NEEDED

"More recently it has become increasingly clear that the business man, together with the engineer, has come close to disrupting the society he was supposed to serve.

"Consequently, business schools have been turning their attention to the wider training of their students as responsible members of society.

"I do not believe our society can continue to tolerate highly trained engineers whose interest is exclusively centered in the details of mechanisms.

"Unless we can train engineers whose interest in the vital social processes is comparable to their technical interests, I fear we engineers may be paving the way for a companion volume to Gibbons' 'Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.'"

Hunt Bandits In 2 Holdups

Search for four armed bandits who held up the Old Arch Inn, Arch street, and for two men who held up a Compton street store last night, was pushed by Boston police today.

The quartet who entered the Arch Inn were all masked by handkerchiefs. They stole $250 from the cash register. At Compton street the gunmen got $275.

MARINE LABOR PARLEYS SET AS U. S. SUBSIDIZES LINES

Hearings on labor problems in the American Merchant Marine have been scheduled for Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf ports by the Federal Maritime Commission in a move to stifle current unrest.

Commissioner E. C. Moran, Jr., will be in charge of Atlantic and Gulf coast hearings. Commissioner Thomas M. Woodward will direct the Pacific coast inquiries. Investigations will begin July 13 and end August 5.

Settlement of labor problems is intended to bolster the commission's extension of subsidies to 151 merchant craft. The commission made public its negotiation of its subsidy agreements for a six-month experimental term.

Subsidies have been granted as part of an extensive plan to put the American merchant marine on an equal competitive basis with foreign lines.

AFFECTS 16 COMPANIES

Sixteen companies operating 151 ships in foreign trade are affected in the subsidies. Each has been given an "operating-differential subsidy."

The move, both sides agreed, was "the greatest step the United States has ever made to put American steamship operations on a parity with foreign competitors."

At the same time the government settled for less than $750,000 claims aggregating $73,000,000 brought by holders of ocean mail contracts that have not expired.

The subsidies become effective immediately. They were announced by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission.

"DISGUISE" AT END

The New system replaces ocean mail "disguised" subsidies, under which the American merchant marine has been operating for nine years.

The Government will save money by the change. Under the ocean mail contracts system, it would have paid $7,600,000 to the same lines in the next six months. Instead, it will pay $4,850,000 in direct subsidies, a reduction of 49 per cent.

Despite the decreased payments, American shipping is not discouraged by the change, Kennedy said.

"On the contrary, the new arrangement lays the basis for permanent and practical encouragement on a fair basis," he announced.

The new agreements have been signed for a six-month "experimental" period.

Kennedy also announced that the government had settled for less than $750,000 the shipping company claims resulting from termination of ocean mail contracts. Twenty-three companies were included in that settlement.

It would have cost the government $52,000,000 if the contracts with these companies had remained in effect until their expiration dates.

The companies also had claimed damages of $21,000,000 for reduction in mail pay because of disputes over speed of ships, changes, re-classification of vessels, number of sailings, purchase and construction, and other items.

LINES LISTED

American Diamond Lines, Inc., $179,768.

Baltimore Mail Steamship Co., $230,168.

Columbian Steamship Co., Inc., $101,430.

Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., $98,133.50.

Export Steamship Corporation, $466,000.

Grace Lines, Inc., $650,000.

Lykes Bros. (group), $834,940.

Mississippi Shipping Co., Inc., $186,600.

New York and Cuba Mail Steamship Co., $205,200.

South Atlantic Steamship Co., $168,000.

United States Lines, Inc., $750,000.

Claims have not been adjusted with five other lines because of technical complications. Negotiations are continuing in these cases.

The claims that were settled involved 3 companies holding 52 of the 43 foreign-ocean mail contracts.

The new subsidy will work this way:

Each American shipper will be paid an operating subsidy equal to the difference between the cost of operating his ships and that of his foreign competitors, thus enabling American lines to overcome foreign advantages.

4 GUNMEN SEIZE $100,000 GEMS

into Hall's right trouser pocket, but found nothing. He did not take time to search another pocket where Hall had a large roll of bills.

At that point, two men in another car drove up and muttered:

"Hurry up, Joe."

The bandits then fled in their car, which later was found abandoned nearby, a fender dented.

Hall and Joseph Al Roy, special patrolman of Beekman residential area, dashed into the basement of the apartment building and telephoned police. Four radio patrol cars of officers arrived at the scene and a police alarm was broadcast.

"I think if we had been a little tougher we could have saved some jewelry," Mrs. Forrestal remarked to police.

"I think we did all right," Hall commented grimly.

Police said they believe the robbers were the same ones who several months ago took some jewelry from Gypsy Rose Lee, actress.

Shortly before the robbery, the robbers' car pulled into Beekman Place, near Mrs. Forrestal's apartment, and parked about five feet from the curb, attracting the attention of Special Patrolman Roy.

"You can't park here," said Roy, approaching the car. "You'll have to move."

"Okay," replied the driver, "We're going out in a minute."

"You'll have to go now," said Roy, and went back to his post.

Gypsy Rose Lee was robbed of jewels she valued at $25,000 last November by six gunmen who accosted her in the vestibule of her apartment.

More recent holdups included $25,000 loot taken from Mrs. Maxwell Shapiro and Mrs. Harold Herman by things police believe were members of a gang; $15,000 taken from Julius Knapp, jewelry salesman, by three robbers on a subway train; $15,000 from three persons in a fashionable Park avenue hotel, and $15,000 from a Brooklyn pawnshop.

Kirby to Address D. A. V. Tomorrow

In a last-minute change, the committee for the 16th annual state convention of the Disabled American veterans of the World War today announced that Thomas Kirby, chairman of the national legislative department, will address the convention banquet tomorrow night instead of Sunday.

Kirby's speech will be broadcast at 8 p. m. tomorrow night from the Parker House.

NOBODY ENJOYS TAKING MEDICINE!

Yet most people at some time suffer from common constipation. Why not correct this condition the natural way—by including a ready-to-eat cereal with your daily meals instead of taking weakening pills and drugs?

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN adds the "bulk" the average system needs. In the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, forming a soft, spongelike mass — which gently cleanses the intestines.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B to tone up the intestines and iron for the blood.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls a day, as a cereal with milk or cream, or cooked into appetizing muffins, breads, etc. Three times daily in severe cases.

ALL-BRAN is sold at all grocers. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

R. I. Seeks Woman Held in N. J. for Abandoning Boy

Providence, R. I., July 2—Extradition of a pretty red-haired woman to face charges of abandonment of a seven-year-old boy in a local theater was demanded by Providence police today.

Arrested in Rahway, N. J., Edna Jensen, 38, of Elizabeth, N. J., is said by police to have admitted abandoning the child.

Two Providence detectives, en route to Rahway to bring back the Jensen woman, hoped also to induce the boy's father, Charles E. Tilmars, a Rahway painter, to return with them.

No charges have been filed against the father.

Tilmars and the Jensen woman were traced to New Jersey when, after several confused and contradictory stories, the boy finally told police he was "Charley Albright" of Rahway.

N.E. SCOUTS SET FOR PAGEANT; CAMP MUDDY

Washington, July 2 (AP)—New England Scouts, recovering from a second drenching since their arrival at the Scout Jamboree, staged a dress rehearsal today of the pageant they will present tonight.

A heavy rain during the night failed to upset their camp routine, although it added to the depth of the mud on the camp site along the Potomac river.

ELABORATE PAGEANT

Tonight's elaborate pageant will depict the Pilgrim's first Thanksgiving at Plymouth, the Yankee clipper ship era and other historical scenes from the pages of New England history.

After representing Indians, Pilgrims and fishermen of bygone days, the New Englanders will remove their costumes and exhibit their skill in scoutcraft, gymnastics, boxing and wrestling.

Scout officials in charge of the pageant are J. Harold Williams, Providence, director; Assistant Directors William V. M. Fawcett, Newton, Mass.; C. Raymond Weston, Providence, and W. R. Speirs, Bangor, Me.

OTHER OFFICIALS

Other officials are A. H. Breckbill, Bristol, Conn., and Edmund Strang, Derby, Conn., call masters; H. W. Schenkenberg, Jr., Norwalk, Conn., entrance manager; William Wheeler, Meriden, Conn., exit manager; Edward W. Nelson, Winchester, Mass., property director.

Edward F. Knapp, Springfield, Vt., costume director; Harry Donohue, Waterbury, Conn., music director; Leigh M. Nisbet, Newton, Mass., mobilization director, and Arnold Chick, Watertown, Mass., bandmaster.

24 NEW POLICE SWORN; 1 SHY

Boston's second batch of new policemen—the class of July, 1937—was sworn in today, but the class was one shy.

George D. Wilson of 1 Tovar street, Dorchester, who passed both mental and physical tests with flying colors, notified police officials that he has changed his mind and will keep his job with the telephone company.

When the last batch of 25 new appointees is called in August, therefore, the number will be raised to 26 in order to meet the 150-man authorization by the city council.

This is the third batch called, the first one numbering 75 new men and the second 25.

After being sworn in by Chief Clerk Thomas Gill, today's new men were assigned to police school, which they will attend until August 1.

President Ready For Amateur Hour

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Both President Roosevelt and John Barrymore quoted Shakespeare this week. That's enough for another Major Bowes unit.

Barrymore's running mate was Richard the Third, Franklin Delano's choice for alternate was Romeo. Neither one of these birds is on the Civil Service list.

Loyal Democrats are sore at Romeo being jumped over their heads. And there is no Al Smith here to ask "is that old potato after a third term or the Pulitzer prize."

P. S.—The real cause of that trouble among the Democrats on Jefferson Island was a Republican sneaking in and grabbing the rowboat concession.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all rights reserved. Distributed by Universal Service.)

Damon Runyon

It seems that we are now an admiral in the Cherry River Navy, with a handsomely embossed certificate attesting to the honor, which we have filed away with the handsomely engrossed certifications of a Southern colonelcy, a courtesy mayoralty, and an honorable discharge as private in the United States army.

This last document is not as handsomely embossed, yet it represents the only title we ever were able to acquire that carried any emoluments. All the others have been somewhat empty, save, of course, in friendly spirit. But as private in the United States army we received a regular wage, scarcely commensurate with our tremendous service, perhaps, but adequate at the time for our modest requirements. We were somewhat apprehensive at first that our new admiralcy might impose activities of a seafaring nature with which we would scarcely be in sympathy.

You are now listening to positively the worst sailor in the world. Indeed, we have been shuddering for the past month over the loath some prospect that confronts us of following th. big yacht race off Newport aboard one of those jigging coast guarders that are assigned to the newspaper observers.

SAFE OCEAN FOR DAMON

On consulting the map, however, we find that Cherry river is a water course pretty much inland, and apparently not of such breadth or depth as to cause the heart of the poorest mariner to quail. Still, we once suffered severe mal de mer crossing the Gowanus canal.

Cherry river purls through Nicholas county, West Virginia, the great state that produced Mr. George Preston Marshall and Mr. Riley Wilson.

At the forks of the Cherry river, southeast of the capital of the state, you come upon the thriving city of Richwood, which was founded thirty-seven years ago. It was founded in the heart of a region rich in timber, so some genius said: "Let's call her Richwood." The name of the average American city is born of less inspiration, and appropriateness.

SONG OF LUMBERJACK

Down through the years the surrounding hills echoed to the buzz of band-saws, piling up the shavings from pine, hemlock, oak, chestnut and beech. The lumberjack was king of that region and we are told:

"He could chop a chip and land it in the forks of a sapling 20 feet away 10 feet above the ground. He could spit tobacco juice into a head-wind in summer time 19 feet from stand, and in winter make a brown icicle before it hit the snow.

"He wore hob-nailed cutters and cut his own hair. These hairy-chested, singing, cussing, carousing jacks carved Richwood from the forest while the band-saws sang their song, day and night."

But it seems these characters have gone along, and we are glad of it if we are to do any admiralizing on the Cherry river. It would be rough company. Richwood is today a city of over 7000 people that makes boast of its mills and factories, and coal deposits and of an approaching homecoming spud and splinter festival.

We are advised by Dr. E. C. Bennette, mayor of Richwood and chief of the board of admiralty in charge of the Cherry river navy, that the festival will run from August 23 to August 28, and we judge that a good time will be had by all. It is Richwood's first appearance in the festival arena.

IDAHO POTATO FOE

The festival takes title partly from the fact that Nicholas county farmers are producing a big fat potato that they claim rivals the Idaho potato for baking qualities, a claim that amounts to challenging the champion of the world.

The Idaho potato has for years held, among potatoes, a status equivalent to that of, say, Joe Louis in the manly art. However, we cannot cite Nicholas county off for claiming.

It may interest you, as it did us, to learn that one of the largest factories for making clothespins in the world is located in Richwood. A clothespin is a wooden gadget used for fastening the weekly wash to a clothesline. The clothespin has been so employed for a great many years in this country.

We are willing to wager that up to this moment not one in a thousand citizens could have answered offhand the question: "Where are clothespins made?"

HOME OF CLOTHESPINS

Well, they know now. In Richwood, West Virginia, on the banks of the Cherry river. The clothespins manufactured there are formed of the bits of timber snatched from the surrounding landscape. If you attend Richwood's spud and splinter festival next month, they will show you how clothespins are made, and maybe stake you to a few to take home as a present for the wife.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad reaches to within 18 miles of Richwood, and one-fourth of the population of Nicholas county, which is one of the largest counties in West Virginia, resides in Richwood.

It is the largest populated center today between West Virginia's state capital and the great valley of Virginia, and now you know all about the home port of the Cherry river navy, of which we are an admiral, shiver our timbers!

3 Holdup Slayers Executed in N. Y.

Ossining, N. Y., July 2 (UP)—Atoning for a single pistol shot in a Brooklyn bar seven months ago, three men died early today in Sing Sing's electric chair.

State Executioner Robert Elliott jolted out the lives of Anthony "Tough Tony" Gariano, 34, a two-time killer; Harry Eisenberg, 44, of Bridgeport, Conn., whose middleberg career taught him only a taste for easy living, and Watson Edwards, who thought crime preferable to clerking.

UNIONS CLASH OVER PLANS TO OPEN STEEL PLANT

Massillon, O., July 2 (AP)—Under bayonet protection, more strike-locked steel mills opened here today, while rival camps of Youngstown Sheet & Tube employes were stirred by reports of new plans to reopen plants at Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Del Ellinwod, secretary of the Association of Steel Employes an independent union opposed to the CIO strike, said he expected "some definite word about reopening" the Indiana Harbor Mills within a few hours.

CIO strike leaders immediately sent out a general call for pickets to resist the move.

SNIPERS STATIONED

Snipers were stationed along the Lake Michigan shore to "spread the alarm" at the first indication of non-strikers moving back into the mills.

The Indiana Harbor plant normally employs about 7000 men.

Philip Murray, chairman of the steel workers organizing committee, spurred legal steps to wring signed contracts from independent steel producers—the chief point in dispute in the whole seven-state strike area.

On behalf of the SWOC, Murray filed petitions with the National Labor Relations Board at Pittsburgh requesting collective bargaining elections among employes at all plants of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Weirton Steel Company.

TROOPS ON GUARD

The back-to-work movement in Massillon was carried out without violence.

Non-strikers, in about 115 automobiles, quietly drove inside. About 300 pickets booed and jeered but were kept away from the plant by the troops.

Some foremen and office workers were also sent into the plant.

BOMB WORKER'S HOME

Only a few hours before the concern's newest "back-to-work" move, the home of a non-striking employe was dynamited at nearby Canton. The blast ripped the rear porch off the home of Matt Perisch, but no one was injured.

Republic ignored a CIO picket captain's bristling challenge.

Five hundred troops moved in to forestall such an eventuality.

Back-to-work was the music stamping feet were drumming all along the five-weeks-old strike front from Johnstown, Pa., with its recent history of martial law and dynamitings and aroused citizenry, through the Ohio mill cities of the Mahoning Valley, and up to the western terminus of the Indiana-Illinois Calumet area.

STRIKE STILL ON

But the strike, with its record of 13 dead, 250 injured and $30,000,000 cost, was still on.

Republic's Central Steel division normally employs 12,000 men. The opening today called for only 800 workers, the company announced. A "warm up" crew was moved into the mills during the night.

The report of President Roosevelt's strike mediation board, made public at Washington by Secretary of Labor Perkins, put the blame for that board's failure to effect a settlement on the steel companies.

"We believe," said the report, "that the refusal of the four companies to enter into any agreement with the S. W. O. C. (the Steel Workers Organizing Committee) regardless of the number of employes whom it actually represents, which could be demonstrated by a secret ballot election, is not the way to industrial peace."

DEFENDS CIO

Secretary Perkins defended the leadership of CIO, headed by John L. Lewis, and thought it was a responsible union. In this she disagrees with Tom Girdler, the outspoken chairman of Republic Steel, who calls CIO "utterly irresponsible."

Shooting Brings New Strike Clash

Cambridge, Md., July 2 (AP)—Shots fired at two Negro strikers at the Phillips Packing Company set off a shooting affray today between two groups trying to bring peace in the eight-day-old walkout for higher wages that closed the big canning plant.

Investigation of the shooting in which one Negro was wounded slightly last night led to a heated difference of opinion between agents of the Senate Civil Liberties and Dorchester County authorities as to jurisdiction.

East Chicago, Ind., July 2 (AP)—Locked gates were Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company's answer today to overtures from Governor Townsend for a strike truce.

At nearby Inland Steel the furnaces glowed and the mills hummed, but at Sheet and Tube the stacks were cold.

Governor Townsend believed a settlement would be made before nightfall. Officials of the company, there, were conferring and would employing 7000 men at its plant tdeside during the day, he said.

CIO BOMB SUSPECT

International News Service Soundphoto

Shown in custody of a policeman in Warren Ohio, is Gus Hall, CIO and Steel Workers Organizing Committee leader. He surrendered to police and is bound over for the grand jury in $50,000 bail. He is charged with complicity in a plot to blow up bridges, railroads, steel mills and the homes of non-strikers. Police declare they have confessions from three CIO members implicating Hall.

SENATORS SEE FATAL STEEL RIOT MOVIE

Washington, July 2 (AP)—The Senate civil liberties committee viewed today the first motion picture evidence ever introduced into a congressional investigation—a newsreel of the Memorial Day battle between steel strikers and Chicago police, in which ten persons were killed and many wounded.

The film showed approximately 120 uniformed patrolmen shooting and clubbing a crowd of shirt-sleeved paraders among them a number of women.

BREAK IN FILM

The picture showed no provocation and little resistance by the demonstrators. Cameraman Orlando Lippert told the committee, however, there was a break of "not more than seven seconds" in his film.

During this interval, he said, some missiles flew towards the police from the rear ranks of the crowd, and "twenty or so" demonstrators were pushed into the police line by persons hurrying up from behind.

"The apparently was the fire that ignited the situation," Lippert explained.

The film showed police clubbing fleeing women, striking men on the ground, and firing point-blank into the crowd.

LITTLE RESISTANCE

Only twice did the film show resistance by the demonstrators. Once a running man paused to hurl a rock at his pursuers, and a moment later a denim-clad marcher struck at police with a stick.

Close-ups showed police hustling the wounded—many of them unconscious and streaming with blood—into patrol wagons. The stretchers with which the wagons were said in be equipped were not used.

A man, paralyzed from the waist down, lay writhing almost under the rear wheels of the police car until officers picked him up and shoved him inside.

Another striker, apparently dead, was laid by the side of the road with a strap of newspaper under his head.

Cracks of revolver fire and screams of the wounded were plainly audible in the sound-recording, but few words could be distinguished.

POLICE CHARGE SHOWN

The last view before the fighting began showed strikers talking peacefully with police. Chairman Lea had said earlier that they were begging to be permitted to establish peaceful picket lines in front of the Republic Steel Company plant.

The next scene disclosed demonstrators falling in windrows on the ground and police charging forward, swinging their batons on the backs and heads of the fleeing crowd.

Lippert said a seven-second interval elapsed between these scenes while he changed lenses.

Senator Thomas (D.) Utah, told newsmen he considered the film a proof of "extreme brutality" by the police, and that it showed "no provocation whatsoever" for the attack."

Before the film was shown, John Biffs, a strike leader, testified that the Memorial Day marchers did not intend to enter the Republic steel plant when they staged their demonstration.

'Censored' Pictures Released to Public

New York, July 2 (INS)—Release to the movie-going public of newsreel pictures taken at the Memorial Day battle between police and strikers outside the South Chicago plant of the Republic Steel Corporation was ordered here today.

Decision to release the pictures was made by Paramount News, which previously had ordered the newsreel suppressed on the ground that public showing of the scenes might result in disorders in theatres throughout the country.

Lawyer Convicted In Auto Death Case

A session of Roxbury court was held today at City Hospital, where Mrs. Jennie Lichtenstein, 48, of Wayne street, Roxbury, gave testimony from her bed, resulting in conviction of a Lowell attorney in an auto death case.

Bennett Silverblatt of Pine street, Lowell, was found guilty of driving to endanger and was fined $100, but no probable cause was found on a manslaughter complaint. Silverblatt appealed.

The accident in which Mrs. Lichtstein received back injuries, on May 27, resulted in the deaths of two Roxbury women.

MacMillan Ship At Sydney N. S.

Stage Role Offered Miriam Hopkins

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 2—Miriam Hopkins is having the happiest summer in years, swimming in her pool, entertaining her friends and thoroughly enjoying her new home. Such a good time, in fact, that she is not taking her annual trip to Europe.

I thought all this might mean the reports that she is to marry Anatole Litvak were true but Miriam denies she has any thought of marriage. But, of course, a lady can always change her mind. Even though she isn't going to Europe she will tear herself away to go to New York for a few weeks to talk over a stage play for reporting to RKO August 16.

Here RKO opus, "The Female of the Species" or "Indestructible Susan, as it was originally titled has been bought by Sam Briskin, and will precede "Love On Parole." Curiously enough, the Allan Scott, who coauthored it with Charles Norman, also wrote the stage play which is intriguing the Hopkins and which she will discuss when she goes to New York.

If the reaction of the Pomona audience which saw "Saratoga" at a preview Wednesday night is any indication, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's worries are over where this picture is concerned. Fortunately, the very last scene was photographed before Jean Harlow's death and the two reels in which she had a substitute are so cleverly produced that unless you knew that double had actually taken the little star, you would think it was Jean herself.

Louis B. Mayer, who was loath to complete the film after Jean's passing, but was bombarded with requests for her last movie, must have breathed a sigh of relief when he saw how well the picture turned out.

No more suspicions rules for Hugh Herbert, and it's not because Hugh's gone temperamental and demanded bigger stories but because letters by the hundreds poured in the Warner Brothers studio following every screen appearance he made on "Hollywood Hotel" and "Singing Marine," where he plays his own sister, are nothing short of hilarious. Some day, Hugh says, he wants to play his entire family!

But in the meantime Warners are putting him to work in his first starring picture, "The Octopus," from the play by Ralph Murphy and Donald Gallaher. It's all about a dumb detective who just stumbles onto crime solutions.

Jimmie Durante is back in town and he has swung himself right into a job. He and Roma Vincent were entertainers at a dinner Harry Cohn gave to the salesmen here last night for the Columbia convention, and after the two boys were applauded and applauded Harry gave each of them a contract. They'll furnish songs, comedy, etc., in "College Hero," the picture which was originally bought for Buddy Rogers, and is still waiting to be filmed.

Janet Gaynor has a two-picture contract with David Selznick, who brought her back to top honors in "A Star Is Born." But since David has no story ready for his little red-haired star, Paramount is offering everything, including a mortgage on the studio, to get her for "The Barrier," the Rex Beach story.

* * *

A line or two: There isn't a chance for David Selznick to borrow Ginger Rogers for his "MGM Girl" musical. I thought I might as well tell David, for Sam Briskin says in no uncertain terms that Ginger outside of a one-picture commitment to Warners, stays right on the home lot. Well, there's a good job for somebody else . . . George Murphy, who really goes to town in "Broadway Melody of 1938," is being borrowed by Twentieth Century-Fox to go romantic with Alice Faye in "Life Begins at College," one of the newest Ritz Brothers insanity.

Gala Keith Bills for Holiday

The Keith theaters' new bills starting today, will include "When Thief Meets Thief," story of a human "big" burglar starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. and "Nobody's Baby," with Patsy Kelley and Lyda Roberti at the RKO Boston, and RKO Radio's musical comedy, "New Faces of 1937," with an array of stars and MGM's "The Thirteenth Chair" at the Keith-Memorial.

"When Thief Meets Thief" casts young Fairbanks as Ricky Morgan, young college man who has drifted into bootlegging with brutal Jim Dial. When a man is accidentally killed in a battle with Rickey, Dial convinces Rickey he is the murderer and forces him to commit a series of sensational robberies for him.

Escaped to England, Rickey meets Ginny Howard, beautiful adventuress, falls in love with her and by the mutual chance meets up again with his nemesis.

The Keith Memorial feature "New Faces of 1937," brings to the screen Joe Penner, Milton Berle, Parkyakarkus and Harriet Hilliard and a host of other young and talented performers.

The story is built upon a backstage theme and five colorful production numbers are introduced during the picture. The musical score is said to be one of the brightest of the season and brings new songs that promise to be popular hits.

ComedyFilm At Olympia

"I Met Him in Paris," one of the most delightful romantic comedy hits of the season, co-starring Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young, comes to the screen "Make Way for Tomorrow," Paramount's picturization of Vina Delmar's sensational novel of life in the great American family in action, co-starring Victor Moore and Beulah Bondi will be the major screen attractions at the Washington Street Olympia for an entire week, beginning Wednesday, July 7.

"I Met Him in Paris," presents "modern streamlined" romance, enhanced by crisp dialogue, eye arresting scenes, and daring situations. The companion attraction "Make Way for Tomorrow," the splendidly told story of the modern American girl and her problems features one of the strongest casts ever assembled clan, and then to City Hospital where he was found suffering from concussion of the brain and multiple contusions and abrasions. He was held for observation.

From statements of Governor Hurley and Labor and Industries Commissioner James T. Moriarty today, it appeared unlikely that the six-months-old strike would be cleared by department of public works labor and trucks.

Governor Hurley reiterated his stand taken yesterday afternoon when he declared that he would take no action until a report was given him by Commissioner Moriarty who was instructed to make a survey to determine whether the bags of wool had caused congestion along the waterfront.

DELAYS SURVEY

Commissioner Moriarty told reporters today that he would be unable to make the survey today because of other pressing matters.

"It won't be until after the holiday," he added.

He also revealed that the wool orchestrating strike, as well as an attempt to reach a solution toward settlement of the general strike of the longshoremen, was granted Daniel J. Donovan, vice-president of the International Longshoremen's Association, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, who conferred with Governor Hurley in the executive chamber ended in failure.

Donovan was the man whom the employers refused to budge from their stand against the closed shop.

Joseph A. Ryan, international president of the longshoremen's association, also said a general strike

This will prevent more than 100,000 men from working, it was learned today. Longshoremen, warehousemen, truck drivers, engineers and others will be affected.

From the very minute a car goes into service, carbon starts its malignant work. As hard carbon forms and builds up around rings, pistons and valves, motor efficiency goes steadily downward.

Up to now hard carbon found no opposition! But now—harmful carbon's day is done! JENNEY Hy-Power or JENNEY Aero (both Solvenized) work to free your motor of hard carbon and keep it out. Solvenized dissolves the gum binder.

Try this new JENNEY gasoline—it is available at no extra cost—and get smoother performance, increased power and greater gasoline mileage.

Baton Bob's Bing Bugaboo:

One curse on a successful lad is the success of his big brudder before him, and this is the only blight, for instance, on the life of Bob Crosby, who comes to the Ritz Roof for five wks. starting July 11th . . . With only one toupee between them, the Crosby boys run a pretty closely-knit foursome. Everett, personal mgr. for Bing, is 2nd eldest; Larry, biz, and publicity mgr. is No. 3; and Bing is Bob's heaviest fan . . . But Bob, whenever he opens with his orch, in a fresh town, knows he'll have to go through a certain amount of smart alecking that his success is on Bro. Bing's reputation . . . If you only knew how Bob has fought to work under another name than Crosby . . . And how they've refused to let him, because of complex reasons or something . . .

Accent on Youth:

Maybe Hub's Author Ben Ames Williams (he used to rewrite for this sheet) hasn't been notified yet, but, while it looked pretty hopeless for a time, Universal has finally dug up a sepia kid with a cockney accent . . . He'll be in the flicker, "Adventure's End," a Williams piece, and he's 14 yrs. old, from N. Love Mingles With Thrills In Film

By PEGGY DOYLE

Love rampant on a war-torn front would appear to be the background design for the first romantic drama inspired by Spain's bloody internal endurance contest.

It is Paramount's "The Last Train from Madrid", directed by James Hogan, a local boy who has made good in the celluloid capital, and is currently unreeling at the Paramount and Fenway theaters.

Some of Hollywood's most attractive citizens are represented in the group of persons confined in beleaguered Madrid just as the area traversed by the Madrid-Valencia railroad line is recaptured.

There is that fine-fibered beauty, Dorothy Lamour, beloved of the sultry-eyed Anthony Quinn, Quinn is Captain Alvarez who is empowered to issue passes to those who have legitimate reasons to leave the Spanish capital. One of those for whom he has arranged a release is his friend, Gilbert Roland, who is being held as a political prisoner.

There is a dramatic complication when Quinn finds that Roland has sought out the girl he loves, the lush Lamour, the instant of his release. However, with a rare sense of fair play, he determines to wait until all three are on the train and to permit Miss Lamour to choose her mate. Meanwhile, he is arrested for allowing Roland to escape.

Also seeking escape on the last train out of embattled Madrid are Lew Ayres, an American newspaperman who is falling in love with Olympe Bradna, who seems what resembles Simone Simon but is not nearly so wide-eyed and Robert Cummings and Helen Mack, girl of the streets, who also love each other.

For all that you hear the persistent sound of gunshot, "The Last Train from Madrid" virtually reeks with the moonlight-and-honeysuckle aura of romance. For every boy, there is a girl and somehow that the fat little fellow with the knapsack of arrows is a goshdarn busy gentleman even when Mars has the situation well in hand.

Quinn, handsome offspring of an Indian mother and an Irish father, plays the plum dramatic role with genuine skill and sincerity. Olympe Bradna, who is loved by newspaperman Lew Ayres, is a charming, provocative youngster and Ayres portrays his role with a naturalness and humor that are captivating.

Met Offers Tuneful Bill

The Met's stage and screen program combines bright and lively entertainment ideally suited to the weather and the mental relativity that goes with it.

Twentieth Century-Fox's new swingtime romance, "Sing and Be Happy," is the screen attraction. It boasts five singable numbers and a cast of talented youngsters, including Tony Martin, Leah Ray, Dixie Dunbar, Joan Davis and Allan Lane, assisted by Helen Westley, Andrew Tombes, Louis Alberni and Berton Churchill.

Depicting the rivalry between two advertising agencies seeking a super-super account, "Sing and Be Happy" is a zizzy concoction with more soda than Scotch.

Tony Martin plays the barn-storming orchestra leader whose father, played by Berton Churchill, is eager that he be associated with him in the advertising business. Leah Ray plays the girl Martin loves and Dixie Dunbar, the girl artist with the orchestra.

Martin and Leah Ray are an attractive twosome in the picture and their reluctant romance—that is, so far as Leah is originally concerned—pleasantly engages your attention.

"What a Beautiful Beginning," which these two sing singly and in duet, is a beguiling love-song. Other songs in the production are "Pickles," "Sing and Be Happy," "When I Hear You Tell Me You Love Me," and "Travelin' Light."

Gus Van, formerly of the celebrated sing-team of Van and Schenck, heads the stage show, "Sky Rockets." He is in an good vocal form as ever, yesterday's Met fans discovered with pleasure and unanimous applause, as he sang some new tunes and also some old ones that have long been identified with the Van and Schenck team.

The Six Top Hatters, fleet-footed steppers, are an excellent addition to the bill. Others are Will and Gladys Ahearn, who do a novelty skit; Emily Von Loesen, dancer, the Swing-lators in a new series of dances, and others round out a splendid show.

Miss Henrietta Schumann, outstanding American girl pianist and composer, appears in a unique novelty featuring five pianos, an attraction distinctly different and genuinely excellent.

BASED ON THE COSMOPOLITAN FILM HIT

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Margery Morrison is such a stunningly beautiful girl that she can never for long keep a job as office secretary, because her bosses invariably try to get too familiar. Margery always quits the job and keeps her self-respect. Margery lives with her best pal, Susie Rogers. The only man who ever interested Margery is a young novelist, Freddy Matthews, but Margery never saw him but twice and doesn't even know his name. In desperation, Margery buys a make-up and disguises herself as a painfully unattractive girl. She gets a job with the Belden Publishing Company and is taken at once to be Freddy Matthews' secretary, quite unaware that when she sees him he will prove to be the only man who ever interested her.

Now Continue:

CHAPTER IX.

Margery hoped that Miss Belden would tell her all about this novelist she was to work for as they journeyed to his home in a taxi, but Miss Belden seemed to be occupied with other thoughts.

Just before they arrived, however, Miss Belden said, "Because I rave and rant about Freddy Matthews, Miss Morrison, don't get the impression that I dislike him or that he is worthless. He is certain to become a great novelist. His first novel made an instant hit and this one—if I can get him to finish it—will be even more of a success."

"It ought to be interesting work—to be secretary to a novelist, I mean," Margery said.

"I hope you will find it interesting. Now please remember this, Freddy IS lazy. The most important part of your job will be to keep him working."

"That sounds difficult, Miss Belden. Suppose he just won't work, and fires me?"

"He CAN'T fire you. I hired you, and as long as you keep him working, I'll stick by you."

"CONCENTRATING"

Alonzo, Freddy's butler, answered the apartment bell. He recognized Miss Belden at once and seemed rather disturbed, but before he could speak, Miss Belden said:

"If Mr. Matthews told you to tell me he isn't in, Alonzo, it just won't work."

"Oh, no, Miss Belden," Alonzo said, smiling faintly. "Mr. Matthews is in the living room—er—concentrating."

The living room was enormous, and beautifully furnished, with a wide canopied balcony opening to the west, giving a gorgeous view of the bay.

"Concentrating, my eye!" boomed Miss Belden.

Freddy turned and looked at her. "Darn you, Abbey, you spoiled my aim!" he said.

"Well, Freddy, here I am, as per promise, with a secretary for you—Miss Morrison."

Freddy stared at Margery, his glance took her in from her ugly shoes to her drab-colored hair, and he gulped and blinked before he managed to say, "Er—Miss Morrison."

But his amazement was as nothing compared to Margery's, for she recognized in this novelist, Freddy Matthews, the one and only young man who had ever interested her.

NO SUSPICION

Naturally, Freddy had no suspicion that this seemingly ugly girl was, in reality, the great beauty he had tried to get acquainted with in the Black and Gold cocktail bar.

"Why—why—it's you—"

"Is this? You know each other?" Abbey Belden demanded.

Freddy looked at her with rebuke and shook his head.

"I am sure that I never saw her before—or—never had the pleasure," Freddy murmured.

"No. Oh no. Please excuse me," Margery stammered, "you see, I thought for a moment—that is, Mr. Matthews resembles someone I used to know."

"That's often the case," Freddy said, lightly, to put her at her ease, for he was a mighty good-hearted chap and felt sorry for this ugly and embarrassed girl. "Well, we can sit down and chat," he invited.

"No we can't," Miss Belden swiftly broke in. "You've got to go and you've got to sit down and WORK' I brought Miss Morrison here to get you started and to see that you keep working."

"But Abbey, not right NOW!" Freddy pleaded.

"Right now! You'll work in your study, of course?"

Freddy groaned and again looked reproachfully at Miss Belden. "Yes," he said, and sighed.

"Very well, let's get started." Miss Belden crossed the room and opened a door to a handsome little combination library and study.

"In here, Miss Morrison," she said, "there's a typewriter and everything else—"

She looked at a few pages of manuscript and rubbed her finger over them. Then she turned to Freddy who, with Margery, had followed her into the study.

"Look! Only three pages of manuscript on the balance of the novel—and they have been here so long they're covered with dust. I tell you, Freddy, it won't do. You MUST get busy."

"I suppose so," Freddy groaned.

Margery uncovered the typewriter, found a dust cloth in a desk drawer, began dusting and laying out notebook and pencils.

"LOOK AT HER"

"That's the idea!" Miss Belden declared. "Drop in at 5 tonight and report progress, Miss Morrison."

"Yes, Miss Belden."

Freddy followed Miss Belden out into the hall. Margery stared at Freddy as he went out, so surprised that her mind was in a turmoil.

What a situation, she thought. Here was a man she liked, and she had to go about in hideous disguise.

She knew that Freddy Matthews had actually shuddered when he saw her.

"Look here, Abbey, you can't do this to me!" he exclaimed.

"Do what?" she asked.

"Run my affairs, hire my secretary—"

"But you complained that you had no secretary and that you wanted one. I got one for you, as a favor."

"A favor! That gosh-awful creature?"

"But look at her, Abbey! Her face would not only stop a clock, it would make it run backwards."

"What's that to me with it? You aren't running a beauty contest, you are writing a novel."

"Oh, well, at least she is a good girl—a girl with a face like that has to be good."

"Any other kind of a girl, Freddy Matthews," Miss Belden said, dryly, "wouldn't be much help to you in writing your novel."

"No, I didn't mean—" he sighed heavily. "Oh, well, I am sure she will be efficient—she must have some redeeming qualities, but—"

"But what?"

"Well, I won't have any work ready for her until tomorrow."

"Now listen to me, Freddy!" There was a world of appeal in Miss Belden's voice. "Tomorrow nothing! NOW! You made a whacking big success with your first novel. It spoiled you because it gave you a reputation and a lot of money and you are on the verge of losing both if you don't get busy."

REPUTATION AT STAKE

"Now Abbey, don't be vulgar about it," Freddy protested.

"I'll show you how vulgar I can be. On the strength of your ten-page synopsis of your story I sold picture rights to Superfine Productions for $50,000 and they advanced you half of that. Have you overlooked that?"

"Overlooked it, Abbey? I've almost overdrawn it!"

"There you are. Unless your book is finished in 24 days you will not only lose the $15,000 due, but you will be sued for the half you've already spent."

"Shucks, Abbey, they can't get blood out of a turnip."

"You stop being a turnip, Freddy. My reputation, as well as yours is at stake. You have got to fulfill your contract and deliver the balance of this novel on time. Now that isn't being vulgar, it's being damn serious."

Freddy patted her rusky shoulder.

"You are right, Abbey."

"You know I'm right. That's why I brought this Miss Morrison over to you—she is efficient, and she will not distract your mind in the least with—er—thoughts."

Freddy grinned at her, understandingly.

"She certainly won't," he agreed.

"Come here," Miss Belden said, and led the way back through the living room and into the study, where Margery had finished dusting the desk and arrayed papers, books, pencils, erasers and other paraphernalia.

Margery was standing by the window, her mind still in considerable of a turmoil.

"Miss Morrison," she said, Margery rose over to the desk, "See this date, the twenty-fifth?"

"Yes, Miss Belden." Margery couldn't restrain a smile because she saw what was coming. Freddy, glancing at Margery, thought that at least she did have a pleasant smile.

"Mr. Matthews' novel HAS to be finished on this date. He is going to start work right now. You will be equally responsible with him if the completed manuscript isn't on my desk on that date."

Margery looked at Freddy, then at Miss Belden.

"I will do my best," she said.

Spectator Sports Chic

NO LONGER are spectator sports fashions casual to the point of nearly being fit for active duty! If you've been watching their development closely, you have noticed that classic shirtmaker effects are supplemented—though perhaps they'll never be supplanted by frocks and jacket ensembles having a distinct dressmakery effect.

Perhaps it is in a gathered bodice, in a pretty collar, a flared skirt or a wrapped-up waistline. Here's one of the prettiest to date—pure white crepe touched with navy print at the short bolero and in the cummerband. Utterly chic with huge navy felt breton, triumphantly streamered. DICKY DISCUSSES PHILIP ON HOMEWARD JOURNEY

CHAPTER 344

OUR trip home was as uneventful as it was pleasant.

And every wife knows the fillip that my husband gave my spirits when, shortly after the start of the journey, he took his right hand from the wheel, clasped mine and said tenderly:

"Do you realize, old girl, that were going to have a whole long day together, with nobody else buttine in?"

I suppose I must have looked startled, for he added a hasty apologia.

"I don't mean to say that I call the children or your father or my mother—or any of the rest of the family—butters-in; but, come on now, sweetheart, tell a fellow, aren't you sort of glad to be alone with me for a whole day's outing? If you aren't, then I know I've failed as a husband."

His voice held the boyish coaxing note that I love so well, and as every fiber in me responded to his appeal, I was able to answer him with an enthusiasm as sincere as his own.

"You can be very sure you haven't failed as a husband, if any liking to be with you is your criterion of success," I told him earnestly. "I don't know of anything in the world I'd rather be doing today than just this, alone with you."

DICKY SECRETIVE

He gave my hand a fervent grip before he returned his own to the wheel.

"My own girl!" he murmured. "That makes it unanimous."

I found my eyes suddenly misty with tears of pure joy which I surreptitiously wiped away for fear Dicky might misunderstand.

My role was chiefly that of a listener, for in the crowded hours at the camp that had followed Dicky's arrival, and especially with the constant demands of the children upon him, he had had little opportunity to tell me of the happenings at the farm during my trip to the mountains.

Upon two subjects he was silent. Although I put several questions which I fancied were adroit enough to win an answer without being suspected of being direct bids for information, he deftly avoided giving me the slightest clue to any knowledge he might possess of my father's present whereabouts or activities.

And although he discussed Philip Veritzen's vagaries freely enough, I had the impression that he was holding back some knowledge of Noel's problem which he did not wish me to have at the present time.

"I'll bet Katie will get down and kiss the grass where your feet have trodden when you reach home," he said when we were on the last 50 miles of the journey.

"Why?" I asked, startled.

"Because, as I told you before, mother is running her ragged. I've done everything I could think of to hobble the mater, but unless I spanked her or shut her up in a closet on bread and water, I could do nothing. All moral suasion failed, and, after all, one can't apply corporal punishment to one's aged mother."

"No, it simply isn't done in our very best circles." I commented demurely, and Dicky chuckled.

"Not that she doesn't deserve it," he said ruefully. "She's a spoiled child, if ever there were one."

I mentally agreed with him, but with the wisdom born of experience and former mistakes I knew better than to say so. A man may utter strictures himself against his wife or his mother, but he unreasonably resents hearing his opinions echoed. But I could not help a worried question.

"Will matters come to an open break, do you think? I do hope Katie hasn't been insolent to mother."

Acidosis and Acidity Not The Same

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Within recent years a great deal has been heard about the treatment of "acidosis."

It may surprise you to know that this affliction is not at all common. It only occurs under rare conditions. Acidosis is usually confused with another and common ailment, acidity.

Acidity is quite different from acidosis. Let me explain this more fully so that you may appreciate what the difference between the two conditions really is.

In acidosis there is a disturbance in the proper alkaline-acid reaction of the body. Under normal conditions this equilibrium lies midway between alkalinity and acidity. The balance is upset by some constitutional disorder or infection.

True acidosis is seen in severe cases of diabetes, where the fats and acids are not properly handled by the body. It is found in disorders which have smoky, their symptoms persistent vomiting and diarrhea. It also occurs in severe hemorrhage.

On the other hand acidity is a term used for an upset condition of the stomach. Under certain conditions there is developed an oversupply of hydrochloric acid. This acid, which is secreted by the lining of the stomach, is essential in normal amounts for a proper digestion of food.

Increased secretion of hydrochloric acid can be caused by any emotional upset, nervousness, fatigue, faulty diet and carelessness in the choice of food. Excessive acidity is a common symptom in those who suffer from indigestion and complain of gas, "biliousness," nervousness and loss of appetite.

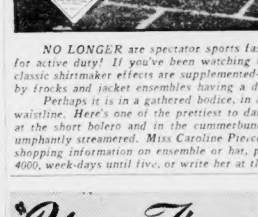
Bridge

A Vital Shift

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

In looking over my scrapbook I came across the hand shown below, which occurred in the first British-American Team-of-four Match.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

The opening lead was the 10 of spades and the play thereafter took identical courses. Dummy's Jack won, and the diamond finesse was tried—the 10 losing to West's King.

At this point both the West players committed a serious error by returning another spade. Dummy's Ace won, and a club was led to the King, losing to West's Ace. Now, with no sure entry left both West players decided that a heart attack was advisable.

The shift to hearts was absolutely fatal after dummy held the opening lead with the spade Jack. Since this placed South with the King and Queen, which meant a total of three spade stoppers, West could know that his only chance of establishing as his own hand contained only two entries.

A club shift away from the Ace-10 would not be desirable particularly when dummy had four cards in the club suit. Thus, a heart should have been West's natural choice.

South would not take his Ace at once. In order to maintain communication to his winning diamond East would play the heart 10. Declarer would have to accept his King or risk losing it entirely, since he would not know where the Ace was.

The hand, as I said before, is a very simple one illustrating the futility of hammering away at the establishment of a suit that one's eyesight should prove to be unestablishable.

Look Years Younger Than Your Age

NOT time but worry is woman's enemy, declares Dr. James Stotter, authority on feminine beauty and how to keep it. With good health, regular exercise and a happy philosophy, he promises that you can always look ten years younger than is your right.

Your face mirrors your worries, and this New York and Viennese authority on beauty is convinced that worrying is the most injurious thing a woman can do to her appearance. The penalties are gray hair and the tense lines which are the beginning of wrinkles.

"Relax and exercise," is Dr. Stotter's maxim for beauty. When you find yourself all tense and edgy, get out in the sun for a few minutes. Sunshine, in small doses, is conducive to relaxation.

circulation, which is your fountain of youth. Facial exercises are a further stimulus to circulation, and afford a change of expression to erase worry lines.

Dr. Stotter very heartily endorses gum-chewing as a change of expression—which is all that facial exercise amounts to. But none of your polite chewing! You are to open your mouth wide, stretch it, and chew vigorously with great gaping movements of the jaws.

Don't chew too long. Your facial muscles are extremely delicate and overtiring them will add lines. You might begin with ten minutes of gum-chewing and gradually add other exercises.

Blowing is a splendid facial. Blowing up a balloon several times a day will put the roses back in your cheeks and smooth out the nose-to-mouth lines. The bigger the balloon, the more exercise you get.

"Making eyes" is good exercise. Open the lids wide, then slowly close them while resisting with the muscles of the lids. You may do this exercise three or four times. The same idea extends to one of the jaw exercises. Open the jaw as wide as you can get it and then try to close against resistance.

FAIRFAX on LOVE

Girls May 'Wear Pants' But Human Nature Stays Same

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A good many young people imagine that the "until-death-do-us-part" clause of the marriage contract has now been changed to "until-we're-bored-with-each-other."

[illegible] assume that modern marriage leaves a [illegible] free [illegible] the beginning to experiment and indulge in extra-marital affairs.

But this arrangement, no matter how witty it may have been discussed in clubs, books or modern plays, is not what it's cracked up to be in everyday life.

A [illegible] on the SAME OLD FOUNDATIONS as it has been from the beginning [illegible] and [illegible]. Modern substitutes, such as being "perfectly free," are just another futile attempt to build a house on sand.

[illegible] youngsters walked about from one parent to another trying to adjust themselves to a change of [illegible] every six months or even oftener.

THE "LONE WOLVES"

A dean of Princeton University has called the child of divorced parents a "lone wolf" and says he presents the most difficult of student problems. And girls whose parents have been divorced are not welcome in at least one highly successful [illegible] which prepares girls for Vassar and Bryn Mawr.

There's no denying that people have changed outwardly, but as [illegible] Gershwin says,

"It's the same old sentimental songs about love in the springtime, the old home and memories of mother that still sell a million copies."

A [illegible] those "brave new experiments" in living seem rather hilarious when insisted upon by a certain lady whose natural habitat is the lecture platform. She has had THREE husbands and THREE divorces which [illegible] is not an outstanding proof of marital happiness.

WE DON'T CHANGE

Fundamentally [illegible] lights and form experiences may have changed the world, but NOT the people. The law of cause and effect has not gone on a sit-down strike.

"As ye sow, so shall ye reap," is as true today as when it was written.

The same rewards or punishments are doled out in the same old way. True the philanderer of either sex may have a grand time while youth lasts, but is anything more pitiful than the philanderer trying to keep up his [illegible] as middle-age approaches?

The other day a girl wrote me a letter [illegible] Her mother disapproved of her going around [illegible] the things which made women happy [illegible] parties with chance acquaintances.

[illegible] "My mother doesn't realize we're living in a new world. In her day, if she went on the street in pants she would have been arrested. But I wear my slacks every day in the year. Sure, times have changed."

Now I have [illegible] think of "Miss Modern," as she signed herself, going around unsought, uncreamed between 20 years from now [illegible] if she does marry it will very likely be some boy as short [illegible] as she is. And there will be [illegible] three trips to the divorce court in search of the [illegible] lady's "brave new experiments" in living.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

When we met she was not engaged to another man, but the date of her marriage was set for the early summer.

We got crazy about each other and to the fury of her fiance she would dance with me all the time and not be at home when he called, though he knew perfectly well I was in the house with her.

After a good deal of this treatment he broke the engagement, and no one blamed him.

It seemed then the only honorable thing for me to do would be to ask the girl to marry me. BUT I DIDN'T WANT TO MARRY HER. I was madly infatuated, but knew that for what it was.

I think this cut her up pretty badly, because here she was a girl whose engagement had been broken up because she showed an undue interest in me and I had not done what was expected of me and became engaged to her.

But she was a young lady not destined to be left alone for long. She began to smile on a married man and his attentions to her have caused a terrific amount of gossip. His wife is said to be considering Reno, naming her as co-respondent.

I feel more or less responsible for this girl and her fascination for me is by no means over.

At the same time I hate the feeling that I have been railroaded by gossip into marrying her. I feel terribly muddled over the whole affair. A G F

MY DEAR SON

As far as having any obligation toward this girl is concerned, I don't see it.

She was engaged to another man when you met her, and she felt no sense of responsibility toward him.

You were just two young people in the grip of fascination, and apparently felt no responsibility toward anyone.

If you had cared enough for her at the time her engagement was broken, that was the time to come across. BUT YOU DIDN'T.

And I can't see why you feel that her future adventures in romance should rest on your conscience.

If you have discovered you really love her, that's another matter. But both of you seem to me deficient in a sense of obligation.

Lotion Has Cucumber Base

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU can't look any cooler than you feel, and you can't feel any cooler than a cucumber no matter how hard you try.

Ways and means of keeping cool, fresh and fragrant—yes, even during the hottest of days—are many, of course. But if you don't fortify your face against shine, you'll never convince anyone but yourself that you feel that way.

Summer being a pretty devastating time on good looks . . . not to mention the matter of personal daintiness . . . it behooves all fastidious women to give special attention to their faces.

After the sun has passed the yardarm you wouldn't think of going around with last season's permanent, using a heavy exotic perfume or even a pale face powder. Yet what thought do you give the selection of complexion needs.

If it's a foundation lotion that is worrying you, a cucumber affair is a safe solution. It banishes shine from your face, gives a lovely cool feeling and acts as a mild bleach as well.

Maybe you've never heard of this lotion, but it is one of those rarities that privileged women somehow have the knack of discovering. It is more or less of an all-season necessity, but it is in the summer time that it comes into its own.

* * *

A friend of ours has one of the most envied complexions in town; tells us she has used this affair faithfully for five years. She says she could not get along without it any more than she could sacrifice the daily morning shower or the weekly visit to the hairdresser.

We are told also that it is the only affair of its kind containing special properties that act as a bleach. And it is so soothing that it can even be used after a sun or wind burn. It is not in the expensive class, either.

To learn the name of this cucumber lotion that makes the perfect summer foundation, call Arline Gould, Liberty 1000, weekdays until 5, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Breakfast Cocoa

2 tablespoons prepared cocoa
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups boiling water
2 cups milk
Few grains salt

Scald milk. Mix cocoa, sugar and salt, dilute with one-half cup boiling water to make smooth paste, add remaining water and boil five minutes. Turn into scalded milk and beat 2 minutes, using egg beater, then froth will form, preventing scum, which is so unsightly. This is known as milling.

Martha Lee Gives Holiday Recipes

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

Yes, we're still talking about the Fourth of July. We haven't [illegible] talked about the typical New England dinner for this [illegible] day.

So today we give a menu suggestion and a few recipes that [illegible] New England [illegible].

BOILED SALMON

[illegible] remove the entrails [illegible] cheese cloth [illegible] cooking will facilitate serving at table. Fish [illegible] on the platter [illegible] can easily be [illegible] when serving.

1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice (more if desired).
1 small onion sliced
1 bay leaf
½ cup chopped celery with leaves
1 teaspoon salt

When the water boils immerse the fish. Reduce the heat at once and simmer the fish cooking allowing 10 to 12 minutes per pound. Do not permit the water to boil as it will rob the [illegible] of flavor.

Lift out carefully and unwrap without breaking. Place on a platter and garnish with wedges of lemon and sprigs of parsley [illegible]. Anglaise separately.

SAUCE ANGLAISE
1 pint Hollandaise sauce
2 hard boiled eggs, chopped
2 teaspoons each of chopped chives and chopped parsley
Chevril, chopped (if obtainable)

Blend all together and serve with boiled salmon.

The seasoned water in which fish is cooked is known as Court Bouillon. A part of this stock is often used to make an aspic or a sauce for the fish. A second recipe for stock in which to boil salmon is given. (This may be used for other fish as well.)

CHILD SLAYINGS HUNT RENEWED

Inglewood, Cal., July 2 (AP)—Baffled detectives started from scratch again today in their search for the strangler of three little girls here.

With the exception of one person some of a wealthy New York and Los Angeles family, all suspects were eliminated as police took a new tack in their investigation, police chief Clyde Seavey said.

Even Eddie the Sailor, whom police have been seeking since the garroted bodies of the girls were found in a ravine Monday was freed from suspicion.

For he, too, was a comparative stranger to Madeline Everett, seven, her sister Melba, nine, and eight-year-old Jeanette Stephens. The Everett girls until recently had been residents of Dorchester, Mass.

District Attorney Buron Fitts said the possibility the slayer was well known to the three girls is based on belief that they would have been reluctant to accompany a stranger into the hills but would have gone unhesitatingly with a person whom they knew and trusted.

Claims Glider Record

Koenigsbee, Germany, July 2 (AP)—Inge Wetter, a physical culture student, claimed a new world's glider flying record for women today. 18 hours 21 minutes of sustained flight. She took off Wednesday evening.

Found With Bones Broken, Victim Hides Address

Police today sought to lift the secret of the identity of a man found in the rear of a Summer street building with several bones broken. They said he had apparently fallen from a high window.

The man told police his name was William Mahoney and 40 years of age. He refused to give his address or to name relatives.

Covadonga to Wed Commoner in Cuba

Havana, July 2 (AP)—The Count of Covadonga, former heir to the Spanish throne, plans to wed pretty Marta Rocafort, Cuban commoner, Saturday night.

President Laredo Bru and Colonel Fulgencio Batista, commander of the Cuban army, will be official witnesses of the ceremony uniting the son of former King Alfonso of Spain and a wealthy dentist's daughter.

SMITH HUNTS MUSEUM FOR DERBY IN DUBLIN

Dublin, July 2 (INS)—In Ireland, the birthpace of his ancestors, for the first time, ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith today was looking for a suitable museum in which to place one of his famous derbies.

"I'm sir," he remarked to International News Service, "I've brought along a brown derby and I want to place it in a museum here. I want it to be handed down to posterity."

In addition to finding a museum for his brown derby, Al is trying to find the Irish hog in Westmeath beside which his grandparents lived before they emigrated to the United States more than 100 years ago.

He doubted whether he would find any living relatives there.

"I've never heard of any, and I imagine I would have by now if they were still there," he said.

After a look at one of Europe's dictatorship countries, Smith voiced the opinion that dictatorships may be all right for some of the old world nations but they would never survive in America.

"I was agreeably surprised at conditions in Italy," he said. "One gathers that the people themselves apparently feel they are better off under the present Fascist form of government."

Ends Life in Grief Over Shot Horses

New Orleans, July 2 (AP)—The twenty-one artillery horses First Sergt. Henry Bruning loved were led out and shot this week, condemned as too old for service.

And last night Sergeant Bruning was found dead, a bullet wound in his head, his revolver by his side.

"The only explanation I can think of," said his uncle, H. E. Bruning, "is that Henry was grieving over the horses."

Dr. C. Grenes Cole, coroner, said the death was a suicide.

Woman Dies When Motorbikes Crash

One woman was killed and two men were seriously injured early today when two of a cavalcade of motorcycles collided on Boston avenue near the Mystic Valley Parkway in Medford Hills de Killed instantly in the crash was Mrs. Helen Drane, 25, of Cronin street, Nashua, N. H. Her husband, Norman Drane, and a friend, Timothy Morchart of Rutland street, Boston, are in serious condition at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital in Medford.

The three were returning to Nashua from a days outing here when the accident occurred. Mrs. Drane was riding on the rear of Morchart's motorcycle and her husband was operating his motorcycle alone.

New Hub Gas Rate Approved by State Board

Announcement that the department of public utilities has approved the new "kitchen and space-heating rate" was made today by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company.

In explanation of the new rate, designed primarily to assist smaller users, E. M. Farnsworth, vice-president and general manager of the gas company, declared:

"Many of our customers heat their homes a large part of the year from the kitchen. Some have no other means of heating, and up to now there has been no opportunity for such customers to obtain gas in increasingly large amounts for kitchen heating at reduced rates.

"Our general domestic rate is practically a flat rate. This new kitchen heating rate is a step rate. As consumption is increased the price is reduced. After 1000 cubic feet of gas is used monthly, the rate comes down to 7 cents per 100 cubic feet. After 5000 cubic feet the rate is 6 cents, and after 10,000 feet, 5½ cents."

Farnsworth said that the rate was optional and available to any customer for all the gas he used provided "gas used for space-heating is at least one-half the total annual use." Another requirement, he added, was that the heating equipment shall have the thermostatic control.

TRAINS KILL 2 IN N. E.

Two men, neither of them immediately identified, were killed in New England train accidents today.

Eyewitness Stasia Kiry women told police she saw the man start to cross the track, and then get pinned beneath the train.

It was the third train fatality in Attleboro in a month.

The body of an unidentified man about 65 years of age was found at Westmoreland, N. H., lying beside the Boston and Maine Railroad tracks.

Acting Medical Referee Norris H. Herbison said death was caused by a skull fracture, and expressed opinion that the victim was struck by or had fallen from a train.

Justice of Peace In His Own Jail

Manteca, Cal., July 2 (AP)—Two grand jury indictments charging forgeries, grand and petit larceny, and presenting of public fund, was sent to jail today by Justice of the Peace Henry W. Holdorf on his own commitment.

Facing seven charges, Holdorf was accused of keeping $12,750 worth of court fines for his own purposes.

Reno Decree Won By Irene Delroy

Nor Iron Bars a Cage

Denver, July 3 (AP)—It looked like a police station, so Walter Weaver, 18, walked in.

"I've violated my parole from California," he told the man in uniform.

"I'm sorry, buddy—this is the United States Mint," the man said, "but I'll see what I can do."

He summoned police over the mint radio.

SURE IT IS

...and mighty strenuous too!

"SPORT, even for the fun of it, can be tense and tiring," says Miss Gloria Wheeden, charming co-ed who here shows her skill at aquaplaning. "Yes, I smoke," she says. "When I feel a bit let-down, I light up a Camel and get an invigorating 'lift' in energy."

Miss Wheeden's enjoyment of a "lift" from Camels is shared by millions of men and women in all walks of life.

A suggestion: When an active day drains physical and nervous energy, you can get a delightful "lift" from a Camel. And Camels never get on your nerves.

1 SPEED IT UP! 20 miles an hour on a skittery board is thrill enough! But Gloria Wheeden is a daring miss who hikes it up to 40 (above—then (below) up to 50.

2 HOLD ON! Slewing around a fast turn with two aboard (right). As Miss Wheeden says: "It does take a nice sense of balance and a good bit of nerve too. As a test of skill, I think I put aquaplaning above any other sport I've tried."

3 S-T-E-A-D-Y. This picture of Miss Wheeden executing a hand-stand speaks for itself. There's no doubt about her nerves being healthy. "Camels are head and shoulders on top for mildness," she says. "Much as I smoke, they don't bother my nerves a bit."

4 AND NOW FOR A PICNIC LUNCH. "I always think of smoking Camels and eating as going together," adds Miss Wheeden, on the motor boat. "I smoke Camels—and enjoy the sense of well-being that good digestion brings me."

Floyd says: "Nothing must interfere with my healthy nerves. I've found just what I want in Camels. Mildness—tastiness—a bracing 'lift' when I'm tired. I started smoking Camels 10 years ago."

MISS JOAN BELMONT of New York, is an enthusiastic sportswoman. Like so many of her friends in society, she is a steady Camel smoker. "When I feel tired or a bit let-down," comments Miss Belmont, "Camels are sure to give me a grand 'lift'...my energy snaps back."

"MANY A TIME I've smoked a Camel to get a 'lift' in energy," says Harry Burmester, printer, shown working at the high-speed, four-color press. "Camels have the goodness you'd expect from costlier tobaccos. They never tire my taste or irritate my throat—even smoking as much as I do. Camel's mildness suits me to perfection."

KELLY FIGHTS LAND RULING

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

This isn't a book review because I haven't yet finished the book. This is a kind of introductory note, in the hope of bringing it before the reading public. Later I hope to review it seriously.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The book is "Northwest Passage" by Kenneth L. Roberts of Kennebunkport, Me., author of "Arundel," "Rabble in Arms," "The Lively Lady" and "Captain Caution," novels about the Revolution or the War of 1812, particularly the two major works about Benedict Arnold, from the expedition to Montreal to the Battle of Saratoga.

"Northwest Passage" is published this week in two volumes, the trade edition which is the novel, in one volume, and a special edition in two volumes, one the novel, the other a collection of all the available documents and sources, most of them brand new, which Mr. Roberts has dug up and brought together for the documentation of his work.

Rogers of Rangers Was "Damaged Soul"

It contains many excerpts from Major Rogers' diary and letters, the proceedings of his court-martial, the minutes of famous expedition against St. Francis and much other miscellaneous material. This edition is intended for libraries and students. Most readers will find the novel alone sufficient, a fascinating story of the French and Indian War, a conspectus of historical material of great value, and another remarkable study of a forgotten man in our history.

Not that Benedict Arnold is forgotten. But not till Mr. Roberts reinterpreted him for us in "Arundel" and "Rabble in Arms" did he become alive. Like Arnold, Major Robert Rogers, leader of Rogers' Rangers in the old French war, was a "damaged soul," as Gamaliel Bradford once put it. One of the most brilliant of the French-and-Indian fighters, a man of great parts—he was the author of one of the very earliest dramas written in America, written in good blank verse on a local and contemporary subject.

Great Man Drops To Role of Pirate

This novel is the story of the decline and ruin of a great man, a "damaged soul" whom circumstances, treachery, and his own obnoxious personality brought down to ruin, got him court-martialed, threw him into the Fleet Prison for debt, brought him not particularly creditable service with the Algerian pirates whom later we made war on, and at the end of the chapter as the novel "Northwest Passage" ends, made him a renegade fighting against his own country-men as the Revolutionary War began.

Although the early chapters of the novel were serialized in a popular magazine under the title "Rogers' Rangers," the title of the whole gives a different slant on the man. It is no story of Arctic exploration. It is the story of the dream, the ideal that hovered before the eyes of Robert Rogers, as it did before so many explorers in those days.

It was the dream of discovering a new route to the Orient by way of Hudson's Bay and the Arctic, that dream which turned out to be only a fantasy of the imagination and which in our own day has become a possibility only by the parasite which the Russians recently hazarded. This is the dream which dominates the leader of Rogers' Rangers, which motivates him in the long war to drive the French out of North America, to open up the Western Reserve to the English and Americans and so make the way safe for a new and hazardous route through the Arctic ice to Japan and Cathay and the Captain Cook's South Seas.

Predicts Novelist Will Write History

I suspect the title "Northwest Passage" is somewhat symbolic. Robert Rogers never got there, never got the chance even to try it out. In his strange, brilliant, imaginative and powerful mind—for a man who could both organize his Rangers and write a not-so-bad tragedy in verse was no ordinary person—the Northwest Passage was no "escape" as the modern psychoanalysts put it, out of the difficulties and defeats of his ambiguous life.

This column says nothing about Mr. Roberts's artistry as a novelist. I shall touch on that later. But it seems to me that henceforth the story teller has got to be taken even more seriously as a historian. The appendix of documentary evidence he has dug up and put together is of very great value in the study of the early days of New England in Revolutionary or pre-revolutionary times. I shouldn't be surprised if presently we shall see him writing serious, though never academic, history. But I hope he never stops making history come alive, as a novelist.

PLANS APPEAL TO UPSET AWARD

COAKLEY HAILS VINDICATION

Court action by the attorney-general to set aside the Newburyport land damage award of $28,000 will be asked by Lieutenant-Governor Francis E. Kelly, the latter declared today in commenting on the Supreme Court's decision upholding the award.

Now—to nothing—the court finds me right. Let us hope the lesson of minding one's own business will have been learned through the spanking administered by the full court."

KELLY CONFIDENT

"I am extremely confident," said Kelly, "that when any judge of our equity court hears all the evidence he will protect the taxpayers interests and can set this $28,000 award forth with.

All the supreme court decided was that the Public Works Commission had the legal right to take land for state purposes and make an award for this taking.

I feel sure that every member of the governor's council was well aware of this law before he cast his vote against the outrageous $28,000 award by the Public Works Commissioner."

It was not the purpose of the constitution and the laws, the decision said, to give the governing and council power to veto courts in lawful[illegible] made in authorized offices or to refuse to honor debts and obligations lawfully made.

The decision was expected by all who made any pretense at knowing the law," said Coakley in commenting on the supreme court action which supported his lone defense of the settlement in the council.

CLAIMS "ABSURD"

"No previous council ever claimed the absurd powers as asserted by this one. They have issued manifestos and demands to all department heads and others to the attorney general, the treasurer and the comptroller alike, in defiance of all statutes and precedents and in apparent belief that they are—as one member insists—the supreme power.

Sweeps Winner Jailed for Tax

The Irish Sweepstakes Box of Michael Rodin of Putnam street, Watertown, turned over today as he helped in Charles street jail, broke and the income tax on his $7[illegible] prize won in 1933 still unpaid.

He is charged with evading income tax payment.

"But I've spent all the money," he appealed to Constable Joseph L. Bennett when arrested him.

"That's just too bad," Bennett replied, pointing out the state has been sending him dunning notices for exactly a year demanding its $223 share of the prize.

Rodin revealed he spent his fortune in two glorious years that included a trip to his native Poland.

Dedham Co-Ed Secretly Wed

MRS. NORMAN M. WALKER
Married College Sports Star

BRIDE OF COLBY GRID LEADER

Norman M. Walker, 21, captain-elect of Colby College football team and Miss Alice Elizabeth Connors of Dedham, sophomore at Bridgewater Teachers College, have been secretly married for the past three months, it was revealed today.

The wedding took place in St. Mary's church, Dedham, April 3, five days after the couple had quietly obtained a marriage license in Westwood town hall.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance which began when both were students at Dedham High School.

Mrs. Walker is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Connors of Dale street, Dedham. One of her brothers is a teacher at Dedham high school, and her sister is a teacher at the Quincy school, Dedham.

Walker is a three-letter man at Colby, starring in football and hockey, which team he captained last year. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred J. Walker of West Wood.

The couple are now living in Maine.

Back Bay Fights Liquor License

The Boston Licensing Board today had under advisement a petition for establishment of a liquor store at 377A Dartmouth street, Back Bay, after it had been protested by Boston University officials and representatives of hotels and exclusive clubs in the district.

In a letter to the board, President Daniel L. Marsh of the University registered his disapproval, as did Rev. Harold Major of the First Baptist Church. Members of the Chilton Club, the Y. W. C. A., the Copley-Plaza, Victoria and Vendome hotels also opposed granting of the petition.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

The other countries of the world are not half grateful enough for what America has done for them. I am thinking, mainly, of baseball, and of the fact that if it hadn't been for America, places like China and Cuba and Japan wouldn't be playing baseball today.

ANN MARSTERS

The game is popular in faraway countries because of our soldiers and sailors and marines who have carried their baseball bats and gloves with them when they have embarked on errands for Uncle Sam. Baseball diamonds have been laid out just as soon as office could be safely laid aside.

The Japanese caught the baseball fever from visiting warships and now they have some very expert ball players. When the marines introduced baseball to the Republic of Nicaragua, it caught on like wildfire and the game attained the dignity of an official function.

The Filipinos took to baseball with terrific zest. So did the Cubans—and some of these players have won places on our big league teams.

Postseason games are often played by American professionals in Japan. The first world-wide tour was made in 1889, when an American team played in Australia, Ceylon, Egypt, Italy, France, Scotland and Ireland.

Modern Town Crier Rides in Taxicab

Have you seen the Colonial newsboys of Town Crier yet? He certainly is a modern version of the old Town Crier who, it seems to me, once represented our only way of receiving news to the public. He used to wander through the streets ringing his bell and shouting the latest news.

But the modern one rides from place to place in a taxicab. He is all dressed up like George Washington and carries a shiny silver bell. When he thinks he's found a good spot in which to attract attention, he alights from the cab, and delivers a flowery piece of advertising matter for his sponsors. Then he returns to the waiting cab and rides away.

HAVE YOU ANY QUESTIONS? Whatever you'd like to know, that you don't already know, about the stars or about Hollywood itself, just address your question to Ann Marsters, Boston American, 5 Winthrop square. Miss Marsters is conducting a question and answer department which will appear each Sunday in the Green Spotlight section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

If He Wasn't a Ghost He Certainly Could Act

It seems they were telling ghost stories at a gathering at which Austen Lake, our famous sports writer, was present. Austen, who hasn't much patience with ghosts, decided to tell the shortest ghost story ever told—and it was this:

A woman was hurrying through the South Station, when a man appeared before her and asked:

"Do you believe in ghosts?"

"Of course not," she replied.

"Oh, you don't, don't you?" he answered—and vanished before her eyes.

Don't forget that tomorrow is a big day at Rockingham Park. It's the day of the Boston Evening American Night Pink Final race, and besides, there is sure to be in air of holiday gaiety around. After reading the sports section, I discovered that I'm going to present a cup to the owner of the winning horse, while the horse gets a blanket of roses—although I'm sure he'd rather have an apple, or a carrot.

Childish Reaction— Thought There Was Choice!

A little girl (the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bellows of Watertown) had been a flower girl at a wedding. The result of that experience was found by her father one evening, printed in sprawling capitals on yellow paper:

"Neal," it began, "do you take this wife to be your lofil waded wife?

"I do.

"I don't. (offering a choice.)

"Do you take this husbun to be your lawful waded husbun?

"I do.

"I don't.

"Then I purnons you man and wife and I wish you many happy returnes."

PERSONAL—Did any of you happen to find, in your wanderings a small silver fox cape which belongs to me? It is a devastating loss and there will be a reward for its return.

'DARKHORSE' HUNTER VS. FULLER IN SEMIFINAL

Melrose Youth Tops Levitan In Upset

Playing doggedly and against adverse wind conditions, the two top-seeded favorites in the men's singles of the Hearst New England regional tennis tournament have battled their way into the semifinals.

At the same time, the men's division has uncovered a hitherto relatively unknown player whose strategy and skill have won him a berth in the semi-finals.

The sixth day of the vast tennis tourney being sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser at the Harvard University Courts saw Edward Fuller, Salem, No. 1 seeded player, pressed to the utmost in turning back Vaughn Pipes, Watertown veteran, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

GUIBORD OUSTS RODMAN

Later in the day the second ranked singles player, Paul Guibord of Melrose, was forced to employ his strategy to defeat Sumner Rodman, former Harvard varsity star, 6-3, 7-5.

Scoring the upset of the day, Seymour Hunter of Melrose, outsteadied Walter Levitan, Dorchester, who previously had reached the peak of his game, as he swept Joe Higgins of Arlington from the courts, 6—3, 6—2.

Hunter had difficulty adjusting his returns to Levitan's American twist service bounding high off the backhand but made his consistency count in winning the match, 6-4, 6-2.

Don Martin of Newton, fourth seeded men's singles player, put an end to the brilliant run of victories scored by Paul Buskey, Fitchburg, Middlebury College star and Vermont state champion, 6-2, 6-1.

Martin meets Guibord in the semi-finals tomorrow while Hunter will draw the difficult assignment of meeting Fuller, the gallery favorite to capture the tourney, in a semi-final engagement today.

MISS BRUNO LOSES

Martin's driving and change of pace proved too tricky for the Vermont champion who had eliminated Horace "Steady-As-a-Rock" Taylor of Brookline, fifth seeded player, from the tournament.

Climaxing the entire tennis tournament, the largest ever assembled in the United States, final matches in all divisions — men's singles, women's singles and men's doubles — will be played off tomorrow from 2 p. m. on at the beautiful clay-courts adjacent to Dillon Field House at Harvard.

Women's division saw Baba Madden, Brookline, seeded No. 4, eliminate Dorothy Bruno, adept young Winchester player, 7-5, 6-1.

Versatile at cross-court play and showing brilliantly in her backhand, Miss Bruno fell before the superior strength of her opponent's forehand drives and remarkably strong service.

During the first set she appeared to have Pat's baffled by her well-schooled game, often passing her down the sidelines and returning strong drives off her backhand.

MEETS SYLVIA TODAY

In the second set, however, the Brookline miss appeared to have analyzed her opponent's style, and began forcing the play.

Change of pace, adopting a stronger, more forcing style of driving or returning the play consistently to Miss Madden's backhand which appeared her weakest department, might have altered the score, as the two appeared fairly evenly matched.

The match is scheduled for today at 4:30 p. m.

The women's play saw its greatest surprise Wednesday as Mary Cutter, steady and polished Winchester player, eliminated Flora [illegible] of Newton, top ranking woman player.

Attracting little attention, Miss Cutter has nevertheless fought her way to the finals in the Hearst Tournament by a combination of mastery and skill.

Her weaker opponents she took by sheer skill, her stronger she out-analyzed and out-pointed.

In the most brilliant match of yesterday's play Fuller, who the experts predict will meet Guibord in the finals, came perilously close to being eliminated from the tourney. He was forced to adopt an entirely defensive game throughout two sets as Vaughn Pipes set the pace.

PIPES LETS DOWN

Weak off his game, Fuller yielded the first set to Pipes, 3-6.

In the second set he appeared worried as he set about the task of making his back-court drives find the baseline.

With game 3-3 in the second set, Fuller took the crucial game of the match breaking through Pipes' service after he had won the first three points and appeared on the way toward a love game.

Carrying the game to deuce twice, Fuller eventually placed a fast drive into the back court and Pipes netted the return.

Fuller took the last two sets, 6-3, 6-3, finding the last set easy going as Pipes appeared to be suffering from his great letdown.

Meeting their first serious opposition of the tournament, the favored doubles team of Guibord and Fuller turned back Don Martin and Harry Sylvester, 6—2, 6—4.

Tabor Crew Wins 'Laying on' Oars

Henley-On-Thames, Eng., July 2 (AP)—Tabor Academy's eight-oared crew continued its winning campaign in the Thames challenge cup competition of the Royal Henley regatta today, defeating Reading by three lengths for its third successive triumph in the preliminary heats.

Tabor, the defending cup holder, was clocked in seven minutes 38 seconds. Following their usual plan, the Americans from Marion, Mass., jumped into an early lead, gained an advantage of a length and a quarter in the first half mile and then coasted in, easily holding off their rivals' spurts.

Cedric Valentine Named Rowing Coach at Tech

Young Grad Succeeds Haines

Cedric Valentine, 1926 M. I. T. graduate and former stroke of the varsity crew, was today appointed head rowing coach at Technology to fill the post left vacant when Bill Haines "resigned" a few weeks back. The appointment is for one year.

One of the youngest of the present regime of college crew coaches, Valentine, with raw material, turned out the crack M. I. T. varsity 150-pound crew last spring that smashed to victory over Harvard and Yale and other college lightweights to win the Joseph Wright Intercollegiate trophy.

BOAT BUILDER

Valentine knows the Tech system from "A" to "Z" and is not only a crack oarsman in his own right, extremely popular with the Tech crew stalwarts, but is a boat builder.

It was his light eight oared shell, [illegible] that carried the M. I. T. lightweights to [illegible] championship.

Valentine is married and lives in Newton. He will have a [illegible] veteran [illegible] back in the [illegible] [illegible] during the past season.

Valentine coached the Tech [illegible] shells in 1927 and 1928, and resigned when he transferred his business to another city.

STROKED 1924 SHELL

He is a keen student of rowing and has a hunch that Tech can [illegible] its nautical records to a higher level. No radical shifts or alterations are planned in the Tech set-up, he says.

He stroked the Tech shell of 1924 that won over Cornell to produce the first intercollegiate victory ever recorded for the Beavers.

The new Tech coach is a "fighter" and his superb oarsmanship as stroke of the 150-pound crew two years after setting the pace to give Tech its first varsity win, pulled the No. 8 oar to give Tech a [illegible] an undefeated record.

New Tech Crew Coach

Dykes Gets Four As Chisox Win

Chicago, July 2 (US)—Manager Jimmy Dykes, making his first appearance of the season, paced a potent Chicago attack as the White Sox overwhelmed the Detroit Tigers 15 to 8.

Dykes collected four hits and drove in three runs as Vernon Kennedy and Clint Brown gave up 11 hits to the Bengals over the route. Jackie Hayes drove in four Chicago runs with a homer and a single, while Rudy York homered for the Tigers.

AUSTEN LAKE

Return of Natives:

Al Schacht Sees

Red Sox Out

WASHINGTON, D. C., JULY 2—It was as the Red Sox started the second disaster of their mid-week interlude in Washington that a voice, familiarly nasal, intoned from the rear of the newspaper coop.

AUSTEN LAKE

"Gentlemen of the press," said the voice with the peculiar, thespian accents of Al Schacht, the noted ball clown and mimic. And there he stood, in a coat of small-pox plaid, a lemon polo shirt and his Arab-features burned a gravy brown.

He had hoboed his way, he said, in his de luxe special-bodied roadster from Tennessee that morning, impelled by a nostalgic urge to see his old playmates in action. He had missed the burly-burly of daily baseball, the sour after taste of defeat and the exhilarating uplift of victory.

Pines for Raspberries

AS HE TALKED, aiming random chirps at unattentive ears, a Red Sox double-steal fizzled with Cramer being caught on a forlorn gallop to the plate. Schacht's rubbery face lit with a home coming light.

"Like old times," he boamed, lapsing into rhapsodies of how the Red Sox used to gum up double steals in his day as third base coach and how he had turned back toward the players' bench to face the crowd's hornet hum.

A BOSTON JOURNALIST fixed Al with a rebukine eye and said that these ittle foozles which he was witnessing were just a few left over remnants from last year's foozles, and that the 1937 Red Sox were an earnest, industrious set, imbued with a pennant vision.

At that instant Jack Wilson was pitching an impressive strikeout sequence, walking seven Senators in three innings and when in the fifth, Jack rapped his second hinge to tie the score at 2-all, Al stroked his jaws in bewilderment. There were creases of perplexity in his brow and a sag of disappointment on his chin. Indeed, Rip Van Winkle might have looked that when he came out of the Catskill Mountains after a 20-year sleep.

The scribes answered in the affirmative.

"Then," said Al crestfallen, "I guess these are really the Red Sox, and I am just an old wicked knicker."

Allah Is Kind—to Cronin

BUT A STALK OF LEFTO BRETON in the person of Jimmy Foxx, an umpire in the heart of the park.

"At least Jimmy hasn't changed. Al said and went on to add that after all the 1936 Red Sox had sometimes grown tired of being the same cocky dumb, dull team and had spells of impersonating the Yankees.

"They were very good at that, imitating," said Schacht "and sometimes they did Joe Cronin, the G. I. holds to the very spittin image. But they weren't so good at being Red Sox, mine."

McFAYDEN TWIRLS

The Bees will visit Philadelphia as well as New York during their three-day absence. They are booked [illegible] for two [illegible] with the Quakers.

"Dear Lazzi, Mr. Ruppert has nominated us for [illegible] this afternoon."

Bill McKechnie gambled to give the "Deacon" an extra day of rest and won.

He sent Jack Lanning to the hill in the final game against the Dodgers, and "Terhacker Jack" came through with a thrilling three-hit performance for his first win of the year.

It was a moral victory [illegible] he lasts through. They [illegible] for.

After being kept [illegible] pace for 12 innings by Luke [illegible] Wednesday they [illegible] through in the ninth [illegible] "Heinie" Manush was at [illegible] starter scooted to third on [illegible] Phelps single and was [illegible] Lavagetto's [illegible]

BEES RALLY

That marker tied the score [illegible] should have put the Quakers [illegible] front. The lone Bees' run [illegible] then off Undertaker Watts [illegible] had registered in the fifth when Phelps threw down town [illegible] to pick Elbie Fletcher off first.

But the Swarm left no doubt as to which was the better team in the eighth. A walk by Roy Johnson, single by Cuccinello, [illegible] Moore, a run rescuing fly by Gehringer, a walk by Fletcher and a single by Lopez buried Uncle Jack Watts and his mates, 4 to 1.

Ann Marsters, brilliant Boston Evening American feature writer, is shown above with Lou Smith, managing director of Rockingham, talking over plans for the big "Ann Marsters Day" at Rockingham tomorrow. The highlight of the day will be the Boston Evening American Night Pink Final Juvenile Handicap, $5000 added feature. Miss Marsters will present a trophy and wreath to the owner of the winning horse.

MAX Sulks Out of 'SHOT'

MUNGO FAILS IN BOSTON

By Associated Press

When and if Mike Jacobs puts on that fight card featuring four world's champions, some smart guy ought to rent a lot across the street from the Yankee stadium and put on a show to take care of the overflow . . .

Those Dodgers have managed to count once in the last 36 innings.

Looks like Herr Max Schmeling has done a swell job of sulking this year. Ought to be the busy season.

Dick Barrett let his bat do the talking on the last day of May and the last day of June.

Notice many times squawks are heard in the early days before the all-star teams. Now we know why. The poor guys who make them on the first trip never get a look.

FANS HAVE RIGHTS

Commissioner Landis and Frank Frick and Harridge would do well to put the running of the game back in the hands of the umpires.

Tris Speaker, Hugo Mansen of the Cleveland Indians and the American League managers forget about short fences. Some of the parks out there. The fans would like to see a game in one of them.

Here's a real hit guy for you. American correspondents who covered the Buffalo Cup matches at Deauville say Jack Dempsey was the only one game that Clara Bow didn't start drooling over. Did Wee Georgie Ohnsorg go taking a swipe at the line job of Bold Venture? He did for the Admiral.

It must be a strange looking thing without all those extra chins.

LEONARD OPENS

Ray Leonard, the mild, light-spoken young colored boy who is the sensation of the Polo Grounds, is a product of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. and the Brooklyn Central Boys' club. He was a pal of Sammy Angott, Lightweight champion, when they were kids together.

Benny Leonard, the old light-weight champion, is the boy's manager. Benny, who quit the ring undefeated, is a member of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. and the Brooklyn Central Boys' club. He was a pal of Sammy Angott, Lightweight champion, when they were kids together.

SCHNAPPS Hambletonian CANDIDATE

Toledo, O., July 2 (AP)—Schnapps, a 3-year-old colt owned by Reynolds of Winston-Salem, N. C., had an edge on the Hambletonian aspirants today with a victory in the $3,000 Matron stakes, feature of the Grand Circuit harness racing card here.

Nine of the Hambletonian entries entered the event. Fort Miami track last night, but Wil Can-in drove Schnapps to victory in two straight heats, winning handily. He finished fifth in the first heat after leading to the three-quarter pole.

Dr. Hugh M. Parshall, the Urbana, O., veterinarian drove Crafisman to a three-heat triumph in the 15-mile trot.

All-Star Pilots Need Pity

FANS HOWL OVER MISTAKES

St. Louis, Mo., July 1 (US)—Pity the poor managers at a time like this when they have to experience the fury of aroused baseball writers at the omission of some one of baseball's notables from the all star lineup —Luke Appling, of the White Sox, for example.

If it was a mistake in failing to name Appling it was a perfectly natural one.

You see there isn't much difference in the process of selecting a first and last baseman. It doesn't pick it or whether a fan does especially if it is one of the unwritten laws that at least one player from each team in the league must be selected, in order to preserve peace and harmony.

Joe McCarthy, the Yanks' manager, who is taking the fall for the failure to select Appling went into his selection just about as you or I would have.

A GUY NAMED LUKE

He said:

"Let's see now—there's a player on the White Sox named Luke Appling and one of the boys was certain to interrupt:

"Oh, yeah, Luke Sewell, a catcher."

So Sewell's name went out. The all-star team had its guy named but Luke and the White Sox manager merely have to wait now until their team wins the American League pennant and their manager, Jimmy Dykes, gets the right to pick the all-star team, and the whole Sox squad can go on it.

What leaves McCarthy's omission of Appling more remarkable, however is the high regard in which the Sox shortstop is held by him.

For a long time, McCarthy tried to make some sort of a deal with Comiskey Park's owner for Appling. He started that back in the days when the Sox had only Appling and the American League franchise and were doing the best they could with both. It may be that, discouraged by his efforts to obtain the shortstop in whom he foresaw the great fuss that was to come, McCarthy is pretending there is no such guy as Appling.

Both McCarthy and Bill Terry the National Leagues manager, have both availed themselves of the chance to express confidence in members of their own clubs the Yankees and Giants, by naming a few of them.

They can hardly be blamed for that.

A year ago when Charlie Grimm the Chicago Cubs' mgr. selected the National League all stars, he dragged along a few bad of Cubs.

Some of them such as Gabby Hartnett and Billy Herman would have been selected by any manager. Others might not have been. But Grimm failed to remind. He chose the all-star game as a means of letting the world know what he thought of his own players. It so happened that his Cubs were one pitching exception, quite through in the grand manner at least in the all-star game. They was not much chance to second guess the winning manager.

On the pitching side this year the American League is not likely to come up with any two compare he with Carl Hubbell, "Dizzy" Dean and Van Lingle Mungo.

N. L. TOPS ON MOUND

The National League is top in catching, with Hartnett going stronger than ever. The infield has both batting power and fielding skill and the outfield knows its way around with Joe Medwick as the "big" hitter as there is no richer squad.

For all the effort to make out of the all-star game a demonstration of baseball as exemplified by the two major leagues the folks to right on regarding the game as a piece of work.

They regard the all star game as a chance to get three days off in the middle of the summer.

While the general public may visualize the athletes as all stirred up with the chance of getting named on either squad, the fact remains that those named, with very few exceptions, look upon the game as a necessary nuisance.

Given their choice they would much rather be spending that day and the other two nothing, either for fun or for the winner of the third at Arlington or elsewhere.

Appling might not be so low in spirit at his being overlooked as his followers profess to be.

Kaplan Scores Impressive Win

Kaplan had things his own way in the opening frames, repeatedly keeping Tony off balance with a sharp combination of a left hook and jab. Going into the fifth frame it was all but a slaughter, with the Jersey boy forcing his foe to give ground for the remainder of the bout.

By JACK CONWAY

WHEN THE AMERICAN and National League All-Stars begin their annual game in Washington next Wednesday afternoon, all of the rooters will not be in the stands.

Out in Prattsville, Mo., there will be a 52-year-old baseball veteran suffering from osteomyelitis, the dreaded bone trouble, who will offer up a prayer for the success of the game.

Then there will be the 67-year-old veteran at Cedarville, Ohio, a victim of loco-ataxia, who will be thankful to every person who pays to watch the All-Star clash. Down in Mobile, Ala., a man 63 years of age, who in his youth was a star in the national pastime, will also be a silent rooter. He is ill with osteo-arthritis.

THE ASSOCIATION of Professional Ba[se]ball Players of America now have $111,413 in their fund. This gives them the financial weapons to care for the sick and aged and bury the dead.

There is Case No. 91 at Leavenworth, Kansas. This player had para[ly]sis, and was given help during his last sickness and then given a decent burial. The total amount paid out was $1445.

Case No. 78 is that of a veteran ball player who lived in Laurel, Miss. and. He had neuritis and arthritis. He was assisted during his illness, and also buried. The total amount paid out was $1825.

I talked with Bill Carey, of the fine president of the New York Garden, about a plan which I thought would help the situation. I suggested that five per cent of the receipts of every championship bout be set aside in a fund for boxers in need. It would be only a short while before a tremendous fund would pile up.

Carey favored my idea, but was out of the Garden before he could help carry it through.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

Sheetweight of numbers brought the Flying Hawks squadron of the John Winthrop School, Dorchester, through the lineup of over 1700 Junior Birdmen units to win against the Boston wing honor banner.

The Hawks are as active as they are numerous. Out of 210 members, 129 are active in Junior Birdmen work each day. The 865 points they amassed were gained by membership campaigns, meetings at which educational air pictures were shown, attendance and participation in wing contests, holding model plane flying contests of their own and visiting airports.

This is the fifth time the banner has been awarded the Hawks Commander Roy Oro and Miss Esther E. Larson sponsor and teacher and all the members were highly pleased when they learned of their victory.

Roy Oro

Last April the banner was presented to the Speed Aces squadron of the Banks-Newhall school of Waltham, commanded by George Hancock, with appropriate ceremonies participated in by Mayor Frederick MacDonald of Waltham and Principal Reginald Webster of the Banks-Newhall school.

Runners-up in the three months' race were [illegible] many tied [illegible]. Here's the list in the order in which they finished, with their commanders.

Flying Wildcats of Newburyport, James Spaulding; Flying Jeeps of Cambridge John Wiskal is; Lone Eagles of Montreal, Canada, Maurice Savard; Devil's Squadron of Greystone, R. I., Donald Campbell and the Diving Hawks of Somerville, George Calvert, Jr.

Tied for seventh place were the Aces High Squadron of Franklin, N. H., Lawrence Thibault, and the John Stobe Memorial Squadron of Everett, David Adelstone.

Tied for eighth place were the Quentin Roosevelt Aces of Southbridge, Alfred Peloquin and the Sky Riders of Revere, Armand Iannelli.

In ninth place was the Wright Memorial squadron of Revere, Gerald Stepner and tenth place Leaping Lenas of Everett, George Abagis.

The banner contest is a perpetual motion affair, being re-awarded every three months. The new period of three months started yesterday. On September 1, the new winner will receive the blue satin, gold fringed, red, white and gold embroidered banner to be displayed in its meeting room for the subsequent three months.

Sheets explaining the point system are sent out to each new group and any unit may get this sheet by sending a request to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston.

New squadrons, Canadian and all New England squadrons, no matter how old or how new, have an equal chance in the present banner race. Each unit started on July 1 with the score of zero. It is up to the officers and members of each group to make its score the very best in the Boston wing.

Cornelia Menard Makes Debut In Cohasset Garden

By BETTY ALDEN

"IN THE SHADE of the old apple tree" is the appropriate tune for the orchestra to play while Cornelia Menard and her mother, Mrs. Ralph Menard receive their guests at Cornelia's garden party debut this afternoon . . .

The weather man has promised Mr. Menard that the late afternoon and evening will be pleasant so everything is in readiness for the outdoor affair . . .

ANNA HOBBS

Miss Menard has selected a gown of Wally Blue organza made with a tight bodice, full skirt and shirred sleeves, to enhance her soft blue eyes and set off her youthful figure . . . She will carry two shades of pink sweet peas combined with larkspur in the afternoon . . . and in the evening she will have a more formal bouquet of white orchids . . .

Mrs. Menard's gown for the occasion is of gray lace and net with a wide silk sash of purple, American beauty and [illegible] . . . and her bouquet is of roses to match the American beauty shade . . . Cornelia's aunt, Mrs. T. Frederick Stoddard, who is co-hostess with Mrs Menard, has chosen a gown of navy lace net brightened with a bouquet of pale pink and yellow [illegible] . . .

The party has taken on the proportions of a house party . . . with innumerable out-of-town guests here to share in the fun . . . an overflow of house guests is being accomodated at Cornelia's aunt's house in Cohasset as well as at an extra house of the Menards which they have opened up for the occasion . . . Some of the debutante's classmates at Wykeham-Rise School are here to serve as pourers . . . among them the Misses Edith Greacen of Morristown, N. J. Sally Smith of Hartford, and Elizabeth Mowbray of Washington, Ct . . .

The other pourers will be sister debs and post debs, including Anna and Clementine Hobbs, Elizabeth Osborne, Barbara Kendall Nancy Whittier, Emily Osborne and Marjorie Remick . . .

Lyman Menard, eldest son of the family, has provided a large group of out-of-town boy friends to add zest to the stag line . . . and in this group are Lowell T. Brown of Donora, Pa., Henry W. Wannop and John W. Wannop of Kingston, N. Y. Ralph Smith-Johansen of Brooklyn, N. Y., Henry Meigs of Staten Island and a number of others . . .

Cornelia attended Thayer Academy and is a graduate of Wykeham-Rise . . . She has also studied at the Garland School . . .

Anne Torbert Plans Home Wedding

THIS SUMMER will be like the brief moment of inactivity before the curtain rises on an entirely new existence for Anne Torbert . . . She will spend a couple of months here with her parents Dr. and Mrs. James Torbert, while her fiance, Horace White, who has left for his home in Seattle, establishes himself in business . . . Sometime in August, Anne is planning to go out to Seattle to visit Horace and his mother, Mrs. Frederic Hall White . . .

The couple plan a fall wedding . . . and though at present Anne is not sure where she will establish her new home, it is likely to be some distance from Boston, which will mean an entirely new life for a girl born and brought up under the wing of a distinguished old Boston family . . . Her fiance just graduated from Harvard where his clubs include Hasty Pudding, Iroquois, Institute of 1770 and the Phoenix S. K . . .

Gay Week-End for Cohasset Folk

NO MATTER what the weather brings, hostesses at Cohasset Fourth of July house parties will not have to resort to last minute artifices or parlor games to prevent their guests from getting bored sitting around twiddling their thumbs . . . as there is a crowded week-end calendar . . . with plenty of activities both indoors and out . . .

After resting up from the Menards' party today, everyone will head for the Cohasset Yacht Club tomorrow evening for the holiday dance, which Lewis Bell, a member of the house committee maintains will be the best yet . . . Assisting Mr. Bell on the committee are Mrs. John Washburn Coolidge, Mrs. Percy Hendrie, Mrs. Henry M. Williams, Jr., and Langford Warren . . . Before the dance Mr. and Mrs. John Chapin and their daughters are giving an informal dinner for a large number of Cohasset neighbors and house guests . . .

If the dancers get up in time Sunday morning they will be able to see plenty of good sailing and outdoor sports and the same will hold true on Monday . . . Many of them will undoubtedly sleep late, however, and just have time for a quick dip before late afternoon dinners and the opening Monday evening of the South Shore Players' season at the Cohasset Town Hall . . . For their opening play the company has chosen "Most of the Game," starring Peter Arno . . .

Rose Weld to Wed Ian Baldwin

Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Weld, of Indian Neck, Wareham, and New York city, today announced the engagement of their daughter Rose, debutante of the 1936-37 season, to Ian Baldwin, Harvard graduate of the class of '33.

Miss Weld attended Milton Academy and the May School. Her mother is the former Katharine Saltonstall. Her maternal grandmother is Mrs. Joel E. Goldthwait and her paternal grandmother Mrs. Stephen M. Weld. Both live in Beacon street, Back Bay.

A brother, Philip Weld, was married last February to the attractive Anne Warren, of Marlborough street, Back Bay.

Mr. Baldwin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baldwin, of Shallow Brook Farm, Mt. Kisco, N. Y. At Harvard he was elected to the Hasty Pudding Club, Institute of 1770 and Porcellian. He is a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club of New York.

No date for the wedding has been set.

Observatory Sets 6 Free Lectures

Open house at the Harvard Observatory with astronomical lectures under the auspices of the Bowie Institute of Cambridge will be held on six nights between July 8 and August 11.

The lecture will be in two series. The first series will deal with "Stellar Systems" and the second with "The Solar System."

The lectures will be held in the lecture hall of Building D at the observatory in Garden street and an opportunity will be given for telescopic observation of the stars and planets. The building and the apparatus of the observatory will be open to inspection and exhibits of transparencies and models will be explained by members of the observatory staff.

Tickets for the lectures may be obtained at the observatory during the evening from 7.30 to 11 p. m.

Baby Saved By Father's Breath

Chicago, July 2 (INS)—Lips tight pressed against the mouth of his first-born, a young father twice breathed life into the body of a three-pound baby boy.

Today the infant, born prematurely and without medical aid and twice saved by his father's calm resourcefulness, was in an incubator at the county hospital. Physicians said that the little tot had an even chance to live.

Scene of the drama of birth and near death was the apartment of Arthur Maul, 21, and his wife Rose, 18.

Maul, a striking steel worker, was at home when his wife realized that the baby she expected for nearly three more months would soon be born.

Vanderlip Had Good Vision

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, By Universal Service)

New York, July 2—The passing of Frank A. Vanderlip, one-time president of the National City Bank of New York, is a reminder that he was a generation ahead of his time in sensing the public aspects of business.

Once financial editor of the Chicago Tribune, Mr. Vanderlip never lost touch with printers' ink.

His journalistic background stood him in good stead as a financier. Unlike many of his contemporaries, he was always able to envision precisely how the public would react to new developments.

Entering Wall street in 1901, in the "public be damned" era, Mr. Vanderlip introduced a series of innovations which are now accepted as common phases of everyday life.

After Jim Stillman summoned him from the Treasury department in Washington to become an officer of the National City Bank, Mr. Vanderlip was shown to a desk, but not told what his duties were. His general instructions were to try to make himself useful.

One of his first social inventions was a periodical to express the passing show in business and bank's viewpoint concerning the finance. For a long time, Mr. Vanderlip directed and wrote this famous monthly letter, which he later turned over to George E. Roberts. The City Bank letter not only became an outstanding organ of economic expression in the United States, but it also set the fashion for other bank publications.

Another evidence of Mr. Vanderlip's social mindedness was the inauguration of educational courses in banking for young employes of the bank. For a time the City Bank ran a regular school, and later its educational activities were fused with the plan of the American Institute of Banking, in which the banks collectively have carried on educational work.

Although in recent years of retirement Mr. Vanderlip temporarily got back to printers' ink as associate editor of The Economic Forum, he did not regret in his active days that he had used the newspaper job as a stepping stone. I stood in his office at the bank in May, 1919, when he startled the street by announcing his retirement from the bank. I was one of a group of news writers who had a warm regard for this very human financier. "Boys," he said, in chatting with us, "the newspaper business is a great business to have been in."

Shortly thereafter I called on Mr. Vanderlip at Beachwood, his magnificent estate at Scarborough, N. Y., to get a feature interview concerning the summation of his experience in Wall street. His first words were "But I have not reached the age of reminescence yet."

A year or two earlier, when I first undertook to interview Mr. Vanderlip, he displayed his journalistic flair. He asked me to visualize where the story would be used, the type of headline contemplated, and what my conception of the interview was. Up instantly approved, with no false modesty or cant.

Mr. Vanderlip was a dramatic figure at a time when his contemporaries were rather colorless. He had a genius for the apt phrase and the public understood his language. No phrase of his attracted more attention than the one used in a speech in Chicago more than two decades ago when he complained that Americans were economic illiterates.

Mr. Vanderlip was news because he had the surprise element about him.

He never was content to be a figurehead or a rubber stamp.

Accordingly, he not infrequently caused resentment among conventional contemporaries. Shortly after the armistice, he disturbed the propagandists by the utter candor shown in his book, "What Happened to Europe." The contents at the time were regarded as sheer pessimism; time showed the book to be packed full of truth and foresight.

In latter years of retirement, especially during the depression, Mr. Vanderlip ventured away from orthodox economics, especially in the field of monetary theory. During this period, he some confided to me that since expressing his heterodox views on banking so openly he felt like an outcast among his former associates.

Charles E. Mitchell who succeeded Mr. Vanderlip as president of the bank after James A. Stillman's brief incumbency, was originally brought to the institution by Mr. Vanderlip to head the bond selling department. The men were long friends, but when Mr. Mitchell was at the crest of his career, Mr. Vanderlip hinted that his former protege seemed to lack sufficient awareness of the public aspects of running a great bank.

After Mr. Vanderlip himself resigned as president after certain losses had been incurred in connection with Russian financing, a critical director remarked:

"Mr. Vanderlip was so eloquent in presenting his viewpoint that even when we knew he was wrong we couldn't effectively oppose him."

Rally in Cotton Prices Seen as Ending Decline

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, July 2—After a sharp reaction in the second and third weeks of June, the cotton market rallied about half a cent per pound. A little touch of "crop scare" news and a rumor that the "farm bill" might yet pass had something to do with the rally. European war fears also helped. But, in the main, I think that this rally marks the completion of the downward readjustment in prices that began in March.

The supply situation is so easy that cotton is less likely to soar in price than many other commodities. There are indications, however, that once the decline in raw cotton is checked, plenty of new buying will appear in cotton textile markets. As usual, when a decline in prices gains momentum, buyers cease ordering and new business falls off. Now, however, good evidence exists that unplaced orders are accumulating.

For example, I find frequent scattered mention of the insistence of buyers on prompt deliveries on existing orders for cotton goods. This suggests no change in underlying conditions. If unfilled orders were being cancelled or if buyers were fighting against taking deliveries contracted for, things would look bad. As it is, unfilled orders are merely being allowed to run off, with apparent confidence on both sides that new business will be forthcoming in due time.

Again, the manufacturers' margins between raw cotton and goods prices have held up fairly well. The prices of most goods and yarns have not fallen as much as raw cotton. This is partly due to increased labor costs; but partly it shows independent strength in the demand for cotton.

Thus the cotton market outlook is not as bearish as it might seem from the supply side. The supply promises to be large. An early private estimate of the new crop registers a guess of 14.5 million bales, which looks reasonable to me.

This estimate assumes an increase in acreage of only 10.8 per cent over last year, which seems low. It makes the condition of the crop excellent at 79.5 per cent, the highest in years. Despite some threat of weevil damage, growing conditions are very good, especially in the western belt. The largest use of fertilizer since 1929-30 is indicated.

The result makes an estimated crop that is two to two and a half million bales over last year, when the crop was 12.4 million bales.

It is true that the average for ten years has been about 14.4 million bales. But meanwhile, production outside the United States has grown, so that foreign growths exceed our crop about 50 per cent and as a result exports of our cotton have declined. In the last crop year, our cotton exports were over half a million bales below the preceding year's figure. Thus a great deal depends upon crop prospects in India, Brazil, Egypt, China, etc., which are still too uncertain to estimate.

The domestic carryover, however, has been cut to one million bales under a year ago, which helps the market. A carryover of 4.4 million bales is about the same as for the five years ending with 1930.

Also in those years, the total domestic consumption and exports of American cotton ran around 15 million bales, while this year they have been only about 13 million.

The world consumption of all growths, however, has increased, and for the season now closing seems to have approximated the total world production of about 30.9 million bales.

Thus, conditions are so balanced that sustained higher cotton prices depend upon the demand and inflation, with a fair chance that the fall will bring gains.

After all, a New York spot price of only 12.54 cents, compared with 12.50 cents a year ago (when the general average of commodity prices was much lower relatively), seems fully to discount the prospective increase in domestic supply.

RETAIL TRADE

Holiday Is Factor of Upswing

New York, July 2 (AP)—Retail distribution was the only branch of industry to make advances of any consequence this week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in the weekly review of business.

Stimulated by Fourth of July and vacation necessities, sales for the country as a whole were 3 to 6 per cent above the preceding week and 10 to 20 per cent above the 1936 comparative.

"Industrial divisions felt the effect of the holiday schedule, but the usual summer let-down has failed to appear thus far," the agency said. "In wholesale markets the pace was steadier, reorders contributing the bulk of volume."

Summer resorts were favored by the influx of tourists and sales increases in New England were 10 to 20 per cent above 1936, the review stated. Increases in other areas were: East, 10 to 25 per cent; Middle West, 15 to 25; Northwest, 12 to 20; South, 15 to 28; Southwest, 11 to 22, and Pacific Coast, 9 to 18.

Plans for the extended July 4th week-end holiday brought increased buying in most branches of retail trade, the Review continued, and to these were added requirements coincident to closing schools and beginning the vacation period. Cash from the marketing of early crops gave sufficient stimulation to consumer buying in many districts to overcome the handicaps of unsettled weather. With the subsidence of the strike wave, the covering of deferred needs also helped to lift retail sales.

Commenting on industrial activity the report added:

"Manufacturers of neither farm equipment nor tractors planned to effect the customary curtailment this summer, due to the slow reduction of backlogs. Little variance from the June rate was indicated for automobile assemblies during the current month, and the uptrend in retail demand may leave many factories with but a brief pause for the change over to production on 1938 models."

'Floating Franc' Holds Steady

Paris, July 2 (AP)—The new Chautemps government exercised its new decree powers today by forbidding a rise in wholesale and retail prices, block post-devaluation profiteering. Violators were threatened with fines and imprisonment.

The devalued "floating franc," meanwhile, steadied on its second day on the free exchange, maintaining the approximate level of yesterday's close.

The range of quotations narrowed in the morning between 26.05 and 26.10 francs to the dollar and 128.85 and 129.00 to the pound sterling as compared to the first day's final mark of 26.06 to the dollar and 128.90 to the pound.

Bank officials said the currency stabilization fund remained out of the market, allowing the franc for a second day to seek its natural level shorn of gold content limitations. Today's steadiness was attributed to commercial buying of francs to make payments.

Brokers' Loans Off in Week

Loans to brokers and dealers in the week ended June 30 totaled $3,268,000,000, down $11,000,000 from the previous week and comparing with total of $1,604,000,000 in the like week of 1936.

Other loans for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities amounted to $279,000,000, up $1,000,000.

New Rates Report Ready

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Editor

New York, July 2 (INS)—The special stock exchange committee studying commission charges on purchase and sales of securities has at long last turned in its report. The committee has been laboring two and a half long years.

And Wall Street opinion is divided on whether it—the committee—has laid an egg, or really has taken a long step toward working out a solution of the brokerage business' chief problem—red ink.

Time will answer that, and the final vote of the stock exchange membership on the report.

The committee proposes a new approach to the commission charge. To the general public, the commission rate is the cut of the brokerage houses for executing buy and sell orders.

Present commission rates are based on 100 share orders, with a sliding scale as to market value. The minimum charge is $3, ranging to $30 per hundred shares for stocks selling between $200 and $250. Above that 10 is tacked on for each additional $50 of market value or fraction.

The suggested new rates are based solely on the total dollar volume of stocks bought or sold, without regard to whether they are odd lots or 100 share orders.

The commissions on stock purchases are proposed on this basis, to quote from the report:

"For transactions amounting to less than $100, the commission shall not be less than 4 per cent of the amount involved but not less than $1. For transactions amounting to $100 and not more than $1000, the commission shall not be less than $3 plus 1 per cent of the amount involved. For transactions amounting to more than $1000, the commission shall not be less than $13 plus 1-10 of 1 per cent of the amount involved."

The following table shows how this will work on 10 representative stocks, bought first in blocks of 10 shares each and second in 100-share units. The new rate is compared with the present charges, with the increase or decrease per cent, in dollars and cents and percentages.

Ten-share units

	Present Rate	Proposed Rate	Increase or Decrease	Per Cent

Allied Chem.	37.50	30.00	7.50	23.4

The table shows clearly who is going to be "socked" if the new rates are adopted—the small buyer. Also it shows that the little buyer of the so-called price stocks is going to be treated rougher than the buyer of the cheaper "cats and dogs." The charges to the little fellow would be boosted from 60 per cent to 472 per cent, according to the table.

Retail Ads Nearly Equal Record 1936 Week

Chicago, July 2—Retail display advertising for the week ended June 19 came within 1.3 per cent of equaling the compared week of 1936 which was the record gain week of last year, Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper reported today.

Newspapers in 78 major cities, used as the basis for this report, carried 21,256,845 lines in the reported week against 21,514,120 lines in the compared week of last year when retailers' heavy sales promotion programs, due to bonus distribution, forced extensive ears, established the 1936 record.

For this year to date, newspapers in the measured cities have carried a total of 500,277,000 lines, against 472,667,873 lines in the comparable period of last year, a gain of 27,609,126 lines or 5.8 per cent.

By its ability to compare so favorably against last year's record week in the face of unsettled labor conditions, retail display advertising is showing remarkable strength, Advertising Age stated.

Weekly Financing In Sharp Jump

New York, July 2 (AP)—Stock and bond financing jumped sharply upward in the week ending July 1, reaching the best total since early February.

A compilation made by Poor's Publishing Co. placed the aggregate of new issues at $182,189,613. This compared with $110,000,000 in the preceding week and $192,499,205 in the corresponding period of 1936. In the week ending Feb. 11 a total of $224,946,043 was offered.

Labor Act Is Under AFL Fire

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

News from the American labor front is likely to change in the coming weeks. Up to now all developments of importance have been of an external nature. In other words they concerned the dealings between organized units and management. Now however, AFL dissatisfaction with the Wagner Labor Act may bring open disagreement with the CIO.

Lewis G. Hines, director of organization for the federation, has already indicated the older union has become discouraged at its inability to secure amendment of the Wagner Act to further guarantee the right of craft minorities in an industry to bargain for themselves. Further than that he indicated that high federation officials are convinced that the National Relations Board has demonstrated a "partisan and pro-CIO" attitude. In those two complaints there is enough dynamite to blow the whole act sky high. And if one doesn't think so a further reading of Mr. Hines' remarks to newsmen will prove convincing. He said, "certainly Bob Wagner never intended the Labor Relations Act to be an instrument for the destruction of the American Federation of Labor, and we don't propose that it shall be."

The persistent declines in both stock and commodity markets in recent months thoroughly dampened inflation sentiment. But the issue is not dead in the opinion of many capable observers of economic trends. Dr. Edwin W. Kemmerer, professor of International Finance at Princeton University, speaking at the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University, said that higher prices are favored. He pictured the forces making for inflation as more powerful than counteracting influences and said the prospects are for a period of rising commodity prices and a much higher cost of living.

While the varied fiscal policies of important nations of the world are admitted to be inflationary to a large extent there is a tendency to believe they can be controlled. In this regard Professor Kemmerer points out that never, so far as he knows, has an inconvertible paper money standard been an enduring success. Sooner or later it always breaks down under political pressure and usually with disastrous results.

* * *

The stock market is facing another of the long series of tests to be expected as prices reach a logical turning point. Toward the final session of the week the minor rally lost momentum. This suggests a nearby testing of lows, which should throw a great deal of light on the list's internal strength. If the rails run into secondary selling in volume and still hold above the low set on Monday, while industrials do the same, the picture will look very much brighter. If, on the other hand, rails do seek a new low and industrials again refuse to confirm the move, there will be reason for just as much cheer.

The most important point for non-technical market followers, who cannot follow and chart the averages, is this: The Dow-Jones industrial and rail averages are currently out of gear. They refuse to mesh in that one wants to go down and the other, at worst, refuses to follow suit. This is the usual development at the end of an intermediate move and it is the reason so many chartists are becoming more hopeful.

* * *

Notebook: The extension of the 4-cent copper tariff did not help the group much . . . But the chances are the good action of a few weeks back was in the nature of a discounting move . . . Oils are coming into strong favor with many market letter writers . . . Our own observation is that the group as a whole looks better on the charts . . . And the reason may be largely attributed to the improvement shown by the Standard Oil issues . . . Which have not been contributing much in the way of strength to the group . . . And if new commitments are made we suggest that Standard's be favored.

STOCKS Irregularly HIGHER

TRADING QUIET

New York, July 2—The stock market moved irregularly higher today in dealings so quiet that the ticker halted frequently. Issues up fractions to a point or so were Republic Steel, Chrysler, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Case, Curtiss-Wright, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, North American, Electric Power & Light, American Water Works, Anaconda, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, American Can, Texas Corp., Loew's, Paramount, Philip Morris and National Supply.

Lower were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Yellow Truck, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Western Union, International Nickel, Westinghouse, General Electric, duPont, Allis Chalmers, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific and Union Carbide.

Wheat was up, corn and cotton lower. Bonds were steady. The French franc and pound sterling were narrow.

At the start of trading analysis were heartened by extension in the demand for commercial credit disclosed by the weekly banking statistics of the Federal Reserve System.

Loans to commerce, industry and agriculture gained $12,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday. An upturn of $54,000,000 in circulation was seen as evidence of preparations for holiday and vacation spending.

The French franc opened .00¼ of a cent lower at 3.83¾ cents and the pound sterling down 1-16 of a cent at $4.94 5-16.

Smearfest Is Keeping Down Re-employment

By B. C. FORBES

What a smearfest Washington is reveling in!

Men not even accused of violating any law are pictured as national traitors.

But for other men indulging in flagrant lawlessness and violence Washington hasn't one word of condemnation, and takes not the slightest step to restrain them.

Talk about "one law for the rich and another for the poor." Isn't this the condition in America today?

What does such conduct by Washington breed?

First, what is the effect upon certain powerful labor leaders?

They have felt encouraged to defy the law, to resort to usurpation of private property, to voice threatenings against workers anxious to earn their living, to perpetrate outrages on both wage earners and property.

One executive whose property was seized by CIO men tells me that when they ordered all employes to get out, the leader announced: "We are acting under the authority of the President of the United States and Governor Murphy." Of course, they were not acting under any such authority, but that was how they interpreted the attitude manifested by those high officials.

And now dynamite is being used to wreck property and to incapacitate plants.

How much further lawlessness and destruction will go before public opinion asserts itself effectively, no mortal can guess. But it has become starkly plain that certain labor leaders and their followers feel safe in committing all sorts of illegal actions.

What of the industrial and other leaders who are being daily besmirched by Washington for no other offense than complying strictly with the law?

Their spirit of enterprise, of business courage and daring, is being broken. They feel they are not getting a fair deal. They feel that class hatred is being fomented against them most unjustifiably.

All this does not make for vigorous prosperity efforts, for confidence, for expansion of employment. It has the polar opposite effect.

"It's a silly bird that fouls its own nest." The government is concentrating its gratuitous attacks on men who contribute heavily to its support.

"Our total income tax payments for 1936 amount to $1,725,790," he says, referring to his wife and himself. He adds that half of all the government left them was donated to charity, "that 80 cents of every dollar received was paid out in taxes and charities."

In other words, Mr. Sloan, who toils far longer hours than any workman—is, indeed, one of the most ceaseless workers in the whole country—works four out of every five days to enrich others, the government and charitable organizations, retaining only the fifth day's earnings for himself and family.

He declares that his income tax statements were compiled in accordance with the opinion of his lawyer, "in conformity with law."

Is it farsighted statesmanship for Washington to blacken and discourage men who work four-fifths of the time to keep government and philanthropic institutions going and who are not even charged with any hole-in-corner devices to violate the law of the land?

BUSINESS REVIEW

Industrial Output Below May

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 2 (INS)—Weekly business review:

PRODUCTION—June industrial output fell substantially below the May volume, largely as a result of strikes and partly because of seasonal declines, the Commerce Department reported this week.

During the final days of last month, labor troubles in the steel industry held production down to 75 per cent of capacity. Railroads felt the pinch of industrial strife during June when curtailed shipments sharply decreased freight carloadings.

PRICES—A slight upturn in the general level of wholesale commodity prices was evidenced this week. The advance was noted principally in the quotations for foods and farm products. Higher prices were also reported for gasoline, causing the fuel price index to reach its highest point of the recovery period.

AVIATION—Aircraft production for the first quarter increased 25 per cent over the first quarter volume of 1936, according to Bureau of Air Commerce reports. Of the 571 new airplanes manufactured between January and March, 342 were for civil use, 107 for military purposes and 122 for export.

BANKING—A warning by Chester Davis, of the Federal reserve board, was sounded this week against the "diversity of regulation and lack of unity" in the American banking system. At the same time the FDIC revealed it is attempting to weed out a large number of weak financial institutions now receiving benefits of deposit insurance.

GOVERNMENT FINANCE—Treasury figures yesterday disclosed the government collected more revenue during the fiscal year just ended than it did in all the previous fiscal periods except 1918, 1919 and 1920. Income for the 1937 fiscal year aggregated $5,280,000,000. Expenditures of more than $8,000,000,000, gave the government a deficit of more than $2,700,000,000.

MONETARY — Determined to maintain stability of their currencies, the United States, Great Britain and France this week reaffirmed their tri-power financial pact, drafted last September. The three countries will continue to use their stabilization funds to prevent fluctuation in the dollar, pound and franc.

Carloadings Up 7444 Cars in Week

Washington, July 2 (INS)—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended June 26 totalled 773,733 cars, an increase of 7444 cars above the preceding week and of 60,145 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

Job Tips The ability to express one's self clearly and intelligently in writing is one of the first requisites in seeking a position. Employers very often judge an applicant for a position by the clearness and directness of their letters of application. Before sending a letter of application, it might be a good plan to allow someone well versed in the writing of business letters check it and give constructive criticism.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, JULY 2, 1937

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION net paid average, 6 months ending March 31, 1937 268,637

The Right Start

THE appointment of Joseph P. Kennedy, a former Boston man, as chairman of the new Maritime Commission, received the enthusiastic endorsement of the nation.

No other selection of the President was so completely free of political motive or so wholly designed to further the welfare of the country.

The people had confidence that a man who had so ably administered the affairs of the Securities and Exchange Commission was the one to assume the difficult task of building up the American Merchant Marine.

Now Mr. Kennedy proves worthy of that confidence.

He settles for $750,000 the $73,000,000 in ship line claims resulting from the cancellation of ocean mail contracts.

He arranges direct subsidies based on the operating cost of American ships in foreign commerce as compared with the costs of their competitors.

He stipulates that operators shall IMMEDIATELY develop a long-range program for replacement of all vessels more than 15 years old.

He provides that if a steamship line's profits are greater than 10 per cent, the Government may recapture subsidies from these excess profits.

He saves millions for the taxpayers by making contracts that require an expenditure of $3,125,329 LESS than the old mail subsidies would have cost.

THIS constitutes IMPORTANT progress.

It is assurance that from now on AMERICAN vessels paying AMERICAN wages will compete without disadvantages with FOREIGN vessels paying FOREIGN wages.

It is new hope that our shipping industry will regain the strength so vitally essential to our peacetime prosperity and our wartime defense.

Give Him More Officers

POLICE CAPTAIN James T. Sheehan, deploring the growth of racketeering in Boston, asks Commissioner Timilty for more men.

He specifically requests two additional sergeants and 20 officers to participate in contemplated raids on number pool and horse parlors.

Without such a squad, he says, there can be no adequate warfare on rackets.

That is a logical argument, one that deserves serious consideration.

Captain Sheehan's career, from the time he was a patrolman through the ranks of special officer, sergeant and lieutenant, shows that he is the type of man who can be depended upon to do a good job.

It is not to be forgotten that he was the only officer in Boston who went voluntarily to the Warner inquiry during the Garrett investigation, when the integrity of the police force was questioned.

On numerous other occasions, though he was frequently "diplomatically" shifted for reasons best known to previous administrations, he never failed to see his duty and do it.

No letter of recommendation is needed where Captain Sheehan is concerned. His record speaks for itself. It speaks also in favor of giving him the support he requests to make this a better, more law-abiding city.

Respect Law or Close Shop

LAWS governing the sale of fireworks must be obeyed. That applies as much to Massachusetts' smallest town as it does to Boston.

If a dealer shows an inclination to make his own laws, he should be compelled to give up his license and to close up shop.

Better a thousand times to have one man suffer the temporary loss of a few dollars than to have many children suffer lifelong loss of eyesight and health.

With the right to sell fireworks goes a weighty responsibility. For certainly the one who accepts pennies from a child for near-dynamite cannot escape a share of the blame when the inevitable accident occurs.

The fact that a five-inch salute will not blow up a building is no proof that it is harmless. Yet police in many cities report that not only salutes but "Roman candles," "bombs" and similar explosives are offered for sale with the assurance that they are "perfectly safe."

It, therefore, is the duty of all parents to buy fireworks THEMSELVES, not to leave the purchasing to their young sons and daughters.

It is also the duty of parents to call the nearest patrolman when Baby John or Little Mary comes home with miniature T. N. T. and says, "The man sold it to me."

The "Fourth" will be as safe and sane as father and mother make it, no safer or no saner.

No Crutches for Boston

THE Chamber of Commerce sends us good news. Twenty-nine new manufacturing companies have been established in Metropolitan Boston. Fourteen existing companies are greatly expanding their business.

Here is proof that Boston, far from tottering with age, is still growing. And with the growth come employment and security for hundreds made jobless by the depression.

The Chamber notes the tendency of both new and old firms to keep pace with the inventor and the scientist.

That is encouraging. Four decades ago the automobile was unknown. When it appeared, Detroit and other cities gave it needed encouragement. And as millions of cars rolled out to all parts of the nation, money rolled in to those cities.

A like story will be written in the future. Inventions little known or not even imagined today will appear to enrich the places that adopt them.

Thus, perhaps, we shall find in some new product the answer to all our present troubles and worries. We do well to keep our eyes open.

Rustlers Ride Again

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Picture this scene dear to the heart of every writer of "westerns":

The night is dark, moonless, with drifting clouds, obscuring the pale stars. The herd of Herefords is bedded down for the night, and around and around them two cowboys walk their broncs, crooning, to keep the cattle lulled, the cowboy's lament, "Hurry me not in the lone prairee."

Of a sudden, out of the black night, come wild yells, and the cracking of 45's and a rush of nightriders. The cattle get to their feet and stampede in terror, and the buckaroos, caught in a trap, are shot down.

And next morning the Lazy S finds itself short of a hundred head of good beef critters worth $30 a head.

That was the way the rustlers often worked it in the old West. But times change, and so does the technique of cattle-stealing. The rustlers ride again. Tramps and Steve are on the hot-owl trail, their long ropes hogging, and there isn't much that the Virginian can do about it. For the up-to-date rustler of the Western cattle country works in fast motor trucks.

He's not for calves, and when he finds an unguarded herd of beef he rounds up the calves and drives them into the truck and is away at 60 miles an hour, over good automobile roads, to his hide-out, or to a dishonest market waiting for just such goods.

A GROWING CRIME

Reports coming to this writer from the cattle country say that rustling is on the increase. Whole herds have disappeared. Big ranches and little spreads have been badly hurt in Kansas and the Dakotas, and up in Wyoming and Montana. The rustler of the nineties was a picturesque outlaw ("Trampas of "The Virginian" was a good specimen). A game rascal who took what was coming to him without a whine when he got caught.

And the punishment in the old days was swift and salutary. A rope over a branch of a cottonwood and something that had been a man turning gently in the breeze. Lynching was the only way cattle thieves could be dealt with then, when the law was mostly conspicuous by its absence or with crooked sheriffs sometimes in with the thieves.

The rustler took with his life in his hands and knew it every minute. The old-time cattlemen hadn't much use for jails or courts. They took the law into their own hands.

But time has changed all that. The modern rustler is not the hard hombre of the familiar Western novel. He's a slick fellow, up to all the modern dodges—with forged bills of sale and fast automobiles and a ready market. He's more of the city gangster type, and, as a matter of fact, many tough guys from big western towns have gone into the cattle-rustling racket.

The losses run into millions a year in the big beef-raising states of the prairie country, and the ranchmen are again beginning to make their own law. Lynching is gone. All that rustlers fear now is a fine or a jail sentence, and they laugh that off.

TIME MOVES BACK

Curious how things will swing back to the old models when similar sets of circumstances are at work. Back in the seventies and eighties, the heyday of ranching, that hard-boiled cowboy rider was the picturesque villain of the day—as unforgettable character of fact and fiction. The ranches were enormous spreads, often taking in half a million acres with free range. The King Ranch in Texas at one time encompassed a million and a quarter acres, and today holds at least a million, under Robert Kleberg.

There were few towns, no telephones, and usually no law. The rustler had it easy. With changing times came the growth of towns, fences, motor cars and more valuable stock. And the rustler changed his style to suit conditions. But we're back again to about the same old pattern, with different weapons and implements, and once again the ranchers are riding the rustlers' trail.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 2—Thoughts while strolling. Why do they always put the telephone book in the darkest corner of the drug store? Crying. Among American men. A little consideration for the thrifty George Jean Nathan has gone collegiate with that brim up in front and down in the back, rah, rah!

Literary looks alikes: John Steinbeck and E. E. Cummings. My entrant in the Sartorial Also Sweepstakes would be Cecil DeMille, Conde Nast and Isaac F. Marcosson. Mike Hogg is a chauffeur who talks exactly like Eddie Green. Eyeful: Youngish brunette with a feather of white through her hair.

For bobbing along with a smirk, no one can top Elsa Maxwell. Rhyme: The Brothers Ritz never throw me into fits. What happens to fortunate, such as Dwight Fiske when they get too old to sing their ribald chansons? Kingdon Gould and F. P. A. could pass for twins in a light fog.

Who remembers when sinus was just old fashioned catarrh? A hope for '70: To sit down at a typewriter and bang out as readable stuff as George Ade can turn out. Something majestic about a New York sundown with that sheet of blood red falling curtain-like at the foot of each street.

Albert Lasker, advertising tycoon, is among the increasing number of highpowered executives who are slamming down their desk tops and going up the gangplank for a trip around the world. Business men used to think they were lucky if they could get away long enough for a quickie to Europe, and a circle of the globe was something of a Jules Verne fantasy.

But with the airplane the speedup and comfort of the long haul a world tour has become just another casual junket. Dick Berlin, of the magazines, for instance, has do-si-doed the world twice in three years.

James Cromwell, the literary society boy and husband of the heiress Doris Duke, is taking his authoring seriously. He works at the trade of writing as prodigiously as any steady-going scribbler. For a year now he has been working on a picture with an economic theme. Although born with the proverbial golden spoon, he boldly chose his title, "In Defense of Capitalism." An old established publishing house got out the tome, which would indicate a high standard of literary quality.

Another interesting wealthy family is that of Kingdon Gould, son of the late George and Edith Gould. Gould married the teacher of languages of their family, a charming Italian lady from Sienna, and they have three children, Silvia, Edith and Kingdon, Jr. They live in a triplex apartment in the East 70's and those who know say it is one of the most supremely happy families to be found anywhere.

Each of their lives centers about the home. The top floor is equipped with squash courts and various games in which all indulge daily. Silvia, darkly beautiful, speaks Italian and French the same as English. She also plays the harp and piano and is a shimmering image of modern Edith, a sub-deb, also plays the harp and piano and writes poetry. A volume of her poems was printed when she was 14. Kingdon, Jr., at 13, makes his own movies, runs the projector and plays bridge with his father's friends.

The mother is adept at painting and several of her canvases have been exhibited. They often go picnicking together for the day in the Jersey woods.

They called Dapper Don Collins again the other day—his 32nd arrest. This time in a counterfeit trading deal. Dapper Dan is one of the creeks that makes the suave creations of fiction writers seem plausible. He is a true life underworld swell, dressing a bit flashy but in good taste, and ordering expertly in the better restaurants. Imported vintage wine with the selective talent of a gourmet.

He has a gracious charm that instantly wins confidence among strangers—which is, of course, number of highpowered executives who are slamming down their desk tops and going up the gangplank for a trip around the world. Business men used to think they were lucky if they could get away long enough for a quickie to Europe, and a circle of the globe was something of a Jules Verne fantasy.

But with the airplane the speedup and comfort of the long haul a world tour has become just another casual junket. Dick Berlin, of the magazines, for instance, has do-si-doed the world twice in three years.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

Queer isn't it, that fallen arches, false teeth, a teeny bald spot, a touch of deafness and sciatica should, by common consent, entitle the human mammal to become an unmitigated bore, bully, pest and general pain-in-the-neck?

Sounds ridiculous, but it's true. And, chances are, you see a dozen demonstrations of it daily amongst your own acquaintances. Middle-Aged Meanies—of all malignant mortals, they're the worst! To the casual spectator they may seem pleasant, sociable, self-controlled ladies and gentlemen.

Their affairs are in order, they are blessed with comfortable homes, loving kin, fair health. But let someone or something rile them and they'll pull a tantrum that'll make a teething baby look like an amateur.

Bertita Harding, in her vividly dramatic new book, "Golden Fleece," dissects one of these pests with a wicked pen. "Golden Fleece" is the touching life story of Franz Joseph, Emperor of Austria, and the lovely Elisabeth he so worshiped, yet powerless to protect against the heckling of his vicious mother.

TOOK PRIZE

Archduchess Sophie — there was the prize middle-aged meanie of all time. No act was too trivial to escape her venomous jealousy. Early in life, her unhappy son "found himself marvelling at the outrageous petty caprices which older people permitted themselves. It looked almost as if with advancing years each generation reverted to the misconduct proper to its nursery tantrum days.

Such teapot tyranny give, of course, endless reasons for their ructions. Sorrow . . . worry . . . disappointment. Yet starry-eyed Youth suffers from identical handicaps, and longs as ardently to take it out on the innocent bystander. But does Youth get by with it? Notta chance—with the whole world waiting to slap their young ears down!

What a pity that the same treatment cannot be meted out to peevish adults! How much happier this weary world would be if "mad mamas" and "petulant papas" were given a sound paddling, if, when and where they deserve it.

A REAL RACKET

Instead, they receive a considerate and respectful which they have long since forfeited and are naturally encouraged to go on being cussedder and cussedder.

If their doctors dast, they'd admit that more people die of their own cantankerousness than of all the hardened arteries, fattened hearts and pickled livers combined.

In view of which, one may wonder why once-civilized human beings should allow themselves to become such pests. The reason is pitifully plain.

Middle-aged meanness isn't merely a bad habit which creeps up on you unconsciously. It is a deliberate and extremely convenient racket.

By no other method can lazy, vain, jealous or bossy mortals obtain so much pleasing publicity or inflict such gratifying misery with so little effort on their own part.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW!

A writer in a weekly magazine says: "All the magic has gone out of life."

What this writer really should have said is: "All the magic has gone out of me."

Magic? Why, it is UNDER YOUR SHOES—you are walking on a small round sphere hanging in space. This sphere is making three kinds of motions at once—it is going around the sun, it is turning on its axis and it is hurtling with the rest of the sidereal system, at an unbelievable speed toward the blue sun Vega in the constellation Lyra.

Magic! LOOK UP—you are looking into an endless space of which YOU ARE THE CENTER, for that space being infinite, has its circumference nowhere and its center everywhere.

Magic! You are literally WALKING MAGIC, for where is the force that makes your feet to walk and the sudden motion of your legs? HOW IS IT DONE?

The Department of Agriculture warns us against the termite—the social white ant. These termites can silently hollow out whole buildings. It is conceivable that these sappers and miners could, if left unchecked, bring a whole city literally down to the dust.

Termites are divided into soldiers and workers. Over them reigns a monstrous-shaped queen, and her mate. This little "prince consort" is always tucked under the queen. This female empire is matriarchal.

Maurice Maeterlinck has written a most fascinating book, called "The Life of the Termites," which is a good companion to his amazing "Life of the Bee."

He tells us that in Africa railroad ties must be constantly replaced each year, as well as telegraph poles and wooden bridges, because the white ants eat them up.

But let us not be too severe on the insect world. Even the two-legged termite, has also a bad habit of gnawing away his own civilization, though he is not directly destroying them, and for no better reason than the little termites on offer for undermining a building.

"Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

This is a proposed amendment to the Constitution which has been favorably reported out of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate.

If the voters say YES to this amendment when it is submitted to them—and the chances are 100 to 1 they will vote YES—the quiet question arises: DO NOT THE SAME RIGHTS AS MEN HAVE IMPLY THAT WOMEN SHOULD PERFORM THE SAME DUTIES ALSO?

Will we the males of the United States waive certain duties for the women—such as soldiering, digging subways, working on girders a thousand feet above the street and cleaning out sewers? Yes, GLADLY.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

We hear nowadays a great deal about "psychosis." Hardly any one outside of the medical experts knows exactly what it means—and even they know less about it than they claim. We shall be fed up on the word in the Robert Irwin case.

"Psychosis" is a new-fangled word that simply means a special kind of mental derangement. Some criminals have a "murder psychosis," some a "theft psychosis," some a "kidnaping psychosis," some a "sex psychosis," and still others a "divorcee psychosis."

A man may have a "psychosis" and still be legally sane, says Dr. Blaisdell of the Rockland State Hospital, of Orangeburg, N. Y. He says that 200 of the 5000 inmates of his hospital are legally sane.

What "psychosis" comes to, then, is monomania—a simpler word than "psychosis" and one that confuses a direct and clear idea. In this regard it may also be said that some specialists have a psychosis for using words with obscure meanings.

We also hear a great deal of late years of the "REDISTRIBUTION OF NATIONAL WEALTH."

The phrase is misleading, for there is nothing else but personal or corporate wealth in America. WEALTH has NOT YET been "nationalized" in the United States.

The United States produces nothing. It has no "national wealth" in itself. All its wealth, aside from some buildings and ships of our Navy and Army equipment, comes straight out of the pockets of the taxpayers. Theoretically, at least, it always remains the taxpayers' money.

"Redistribution of the national wealth" can have no other meaning than taking money out of Peter's pocket to put it into Paul's.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

No man (except possibly a psychoanalyst) knows what it means to a woman, to sit beside a Sphinx all evening, night after night. Lots of loving, good natured husbands come home so tired and fagged out evenings that they just huddle down behind a newspaper and go into the silence for hours.

And after 45 minutes of spiritless monologue, many a woman discovers that she has been talking to HERSELF, when her darling comes out of his coma and remarks vaguely, "what did you SAY, dear?"

The Sphinx may be interesting to look at as one of the Seven Wonders of the World—but not so alluring to live with, or to try to get chummy and confidential with on a long, rainy evening. And NO husband is a "wonder" after a few years.

But all men, except a congenital talker, hate to waste WORDS. Especially on a woman.

Even before marriage, when a man is ardently in love with a woman, he often chokes up and can't or won't say it with words. Once upon a time a man used to propose to a girl in flowery language, if you can believe your Laura Jean Libbey. But usually he got as far away from her as possible and did his proposing by letter.

But now, if a man proposes at all, he does it over the telephone; or he can cram his whole passion into a ten-word telegram.

And, nine times out of ten, the girl either has to do the proposing herself or else wangle it out of him with all the guile and ingenuity of a prosecuting attorney.

The average man never TELLS a woman anything. If she wants to know anything about the spouse of her bosom, such as where he's been or what he ate for lunch, she has to DIG it out of him like an olive out of a bottle.

Maybe a woman never knows how good her husband was or how much he loved her until she's dead and the lawyers go through his safety-vault and find her old love-letters tucked away with his will and the insurance papers.

He will say it "with flowers," say it with checks, say it with diamonds and say it by the sweat of his brow—but he won't say it with WORDS!
